Efforts of Reverdy Johnson to Amend the Convention Pending Ratification.

Letters from Seward, Fish, Clarendon, Thornton and Johnson.

Official British Opinion of Mr. Sumner's Speech.

Close of the Negotiations with Expressions of Good Will.

[Special to The New-York Times.]

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Nov. 13, 1869.

The TIMES of 6th of July last gave a comprehensive history of the negotiations on the Alabama claims question, which embraced the correspondence from the time Mr. ADAMS reopened the discussion in December, 1867, down to Mr. REVERDY JOHNSON's letter of February 19, 1868, in which he defended the convention against the criticisms it had provoked at home. I am now permitted to make public the remainder of the correspondence, down to the 10th of May last, the date at which Mr. JOHNSON retired from his position. The last dispatch written by Mr. SEWARD, prior to his retirement from office, was the following, in response to Mr. JOHNSON's elaborate defense of himself of the 19th of February:

MR. SEWARD TO MR. JOHNSON.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, March 5, 1869.

SIR: Your dispatch No. 112, of the 19th ult., relative to the pending convention recently signed by you on behalf of this Government, has this day been read and submitted to the President. He directs me to express his regret, that it has proceeded so far as to be in the power of the Senate to amend it, and that it has not reached here at the close of the present session of the Senate, that it might be ratified. It is promised that the claims part of that body will be called to it early in the next session.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

REVERDY JOHNSON, Esq., &c., &c., &c.

Mr. JOHNSON was advised by cable as early as the 20th of February, that the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations had resolved to report adversely to the ratification of the convention, but he assumed that the coming in of a new Administration would delay final action. He therefore set to work, on his own responsibility it appears, to procure an amendment to the convention which should provide for the settlement of all claims that either Government might have upon the other. His first visit, with this view, was made to Lord CLARENDON, March 22. CLARENDON thus alluded to the interview in a dispatch to Mr. THORNTON, of the same date:

THE EARL OF CLARENDON TO MR. THORNTON.

FOREIGN OFFICE, March 22, 1869.

SIR: Mr. REVERDY JOHNSON called upon me this day to propose that an amendment, of which I inclose a copy, should be made in Article I. of the convention, as he thought it would satisfactorily meet the objections entertained by the Senate to the convention, and would secure its ratification by that body.

I remarked to Mr. JOHNSON, that his proposal would be a most important one, introducing a new feature into the convention, which was for the settlement of claims between the subjects and citizens of Great Britain and the United States; but that if the two Governments not only agreed to put forward any claims on each other, I could see no objection to his proposal, if it was in the interest of the United States; but that I was not in a position to express an opinion as to the policy of Her Majesty's Government in the matter.

Mr. REVERDY JOHNSON did not object to this interpretation of his amendment, but said that if claims to compensation on account of the recognition by the British Government of the belligerent rights of the Confederate States were brought forward by the Government of the United States, the British Government might, on its part, bring forward claims to compensation for damage done to British subjects by American cruisers, which, if the confederate navy had belonged to a recognized state, were illegally authorized and commissioned. I replied that these arguments had repeatedly been made during the negotiations in order to meet the wishes of the United States Government, and to obtain our consent to put the Alabama and other claims of our citizens against the United States Government, and that we had always maintained that we had not been in a correct spirit, and we only knew that our generosity to custom, the convention had at once been published, not only without any hesitation, but with the most complete satisfaction by the Senate, and that, to this day we had not been informed of the objections made to the convention by the Committee of the Senate or of what course the Senate would assume in a final vote upon it or not.

Under all these circumstances, I said that it did not seem proper for Her Majesty's Government to take any further step in the matter, or to adopt any amendment of the convention, even if it had been free from objection.

Mr. JOHNSON requested me to take it into consideration, and I promised that he would bring his proposal to the knowledge of my colleagues, but that I could not undertake to give Her Majesty's Government my own view of it would differ from my own.

I am, &c., CLARENDON.

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE I. OF CLAIMS CONVENTION.

ARTICLE I. The high contracting parties agree that all claims of citizens of Her Britannic Majesty's Government and all claims on the part of the Government of the United States upon the Government of the United States and all claims on the part of the Government of Her Britannic Majesty upon the Government of the United States, * * * * * *

MR. THORNTON TO THE EARL OF CLARENDON.

WASHINGTON, March 22, 1869.

MY LORD: I have been informed by Mr. SUMNER, the Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, that the convention on claims signed by your Lordship and myself on the 14th of January last will be submitted to the Senate in Executive session as soon as an opportunity shall offer. But all other business has been definitely shelved, by the prolonged discussion on the Tenure of Office bill.

I have also been informed by the newspapers and elsewhere that Mr. SUMNER has prepared a lengthy speech in which he will submit the Committee's adverse report on the convention, and that its tone would tend to excite a warlike feeling against England. When I last saw Mr. SUMNER, a few days ago, he of his own accord alluded to these publications and declared in no uncertain sense that he intended on the morrow to speak, but would merely set forth the reasons by which he was actuated in his opposition to the convention, and would say nothing calculated to excite a hostile spirit by stirring up the feelings of the people of the United States with respect to the course pursued by England during the late civil war with regard to the Southern States.

As far as it is possible to form an opinion of so numerous a body as the Senate, voting in secret session on a question in which, my belief is that it will fail to obtain in its favor the necessary two thirds of their votes. I have, &c.,

EDWARD THORNTON.

On the 26th of March, Mr. JOHNSON addressed the following letter to CLARENDON, setting forth his new proposition in full. It is interesting as showing a phase of the negotiations that never was fully understood:

MR. REVERDY JOHNSON TO THE EARL OF CLARENDON.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, LONDON, March 26, 1869.

MY LORD: I know you fully concur with me in the importance to the friendship and tranquillity of both our countries that the Convention signed by us on the 14th of January last should go into operation. As the convention cannot be effected without the assent of the Legislature by the Senate of the United States, it is important to remove the objections which that body is supposed to entertain to it. I have reason to believe that the objection is in the fact that the convention provides only for the settlement by arbitration of the individual claims of British subjects and American citizens upon the respective Governments, and not for such claims which either Government may have upon the other. If I am right in this, as I think I am, the principle of arbitration is not disapproved of. On the contrary, all that the Senate desires is that the Government shall be authorized to present these to British subjects by American citizens, which, of the confederate navy had belonged to a recognized state, were illegally authorized and commissioned. I replied that these arguments had repeatedly been made during the negotiations in order to meet the wishes of the United States Government, and to obtain our consent to put the Alabama and other claims of our citizens against the United States Government, and that we had always maintained that we had not been in a correct spirit, and we only knew that our generosity to custom, the convention had at once been published, not only without any hesitation, but with the most complete satisfaction by the Senate, and that, to this day we had not been informed of the objections made to the convention by the Committee of the Senate or of what course the Senate would assume in a final vote upon it or not.

Under all these circumstances, I said that it did not seem proper for Her Majesty's Government to take any further step in the matter, or to adopt any amendment of the convention, even if it had been free from objection.

Mr. JOHNSON requested me to take it into consideration, and I promised that he would bring his proposal to the knowledge of my colleagues, but that I could not undertake to give Her Majesty's Government my own view of it would differ from my own.

I am, &c., CLARENDON.

WASHINGTON, March 26

REVOLUTIONARY REMINISCENCE.

Sinking of a Frigate Sunk in the Delaware During the Revolution.

From the Philadelphia Age, Nov. 12.

The hull of the frigate Augusta—a vessel that had a short but conspicuous career in the war of the colonists against the mother country—has at last been exhumed from the mud of the Delaware. The exposure of this relic of the revolution deserves more than a passing notice. Early in the month of October, 1776, the British fleet consisting of the Roebuck, 44 guns; Merlin, 18 guns, and a galley of 8 guns, commenced from the mouth of the Delaware a gradual approach to our city, which they purposed bombarding. To prevent this movement, the colonists had the famous little Wasp and the Lexington, with a few tenders; but they could only harass these vessels. But to prevent their upward progress, the Americans, as a further defence, constructed a fort on the lower end of Hog Island, and between that and the fort on the Jersey shore just opposite they sunk a number of hulks, thus preventing the passage up the river of any heavy vessel. On the 20th of October, 1776, the British vessels named attacked these forts, but to their of the rafts drove them down the river.

On the 23d of the same month the new frigate Augusta, fitted from England, reinforced the British force. She was one of the old-fashioned cumbersome double-decked, with high stern, bristling with guns. She was loaded with ammunition, shot, and a surplus armament for light ships, which the British hoped to construct on this side of the Atlantic.

The fleet, as before, commenced the fort on the Jersey shore, above Woodbury Creek, being cooperated with by 2,000 Hessians on shore, under command of General DAHLDEN. The commander of the American galley Cheaps had twelve smaller galleys lying just below our city, and hearing of the approach of the British, dropped down stream, and on the afternoon of the 24th opened the engagement with the four British frigates. This engagement lasted into the night, during which the Augusta grounded, and her consorts fled down the river. The Augusta was on the next morning discovered, attacked and set on fire. Of the 300 men she had on board, just one-half were drowned, by leaping ashore or being carried down by the frigate when she sunk. Here, in this mud bank, lying near the Jersey shore, opposite Hog Island, she has been imbedded in the deep mud ever since, until the hull sat in the mire to the depth of fourteen feet.

About two weeks ago, JAMES POWELL, JOS. MOORE, GEO. MURPHY, GABRIEL SHEPPARD and CHAS. MEYERS conceived the idea of raising the wreck and reap pay for their labors by selling whatever it might contain. Submarine workers were employed; chains were passed beneath the old frame, and attached to tender boats on either side. The latter were partially filled with water, the cables passing under the hull of the wreck were tightened, and the water pumped out of the boats. The latter becoming buoyant rose up, and with them the remains of the Augusta, which finally were towed to Gloucester. Baker, who is past 80 years, three of the old-fashioned guns were taken out, a number of skulls, remnants of the ill-fated Britons; sixty tons of shot, used in the small smooth bore cannon of the time; a great quantity of Kentlidge ballast, consisting of blocks of cast iron, and a large number of relics, which will be highly prized. Among these were a silver spoon, marked "H. W., 1746," a fat old bulls-eye watch, with its works eaten up by rust, a number of guineas with a raised profile of GEORGE III., and some silver coin dated 1760. The frame of the Augusta is of Irish oak, and the wood is sound and proof against decomposition. It is hinted that after the relics have been taken out, they believe her or all solid and salable material, they mean to offer the hulk to the city at a liberal price.

Important Discoveries in the Northwest.

From the Toronto Globe, Nov. 12.

During the Summer just closed good work appears to have been done by the Geological survey in the Lake Superior region. Professor BELL's party have all returned to their Winter quarters after having experienced many of the hardships and privations incident to the life of the first explorers in the distant wilderness. We understand that the results of the expedition include a complete topographical and geological survey of Lake Nipigon and an exploration of much of the surrounding country. This lake, it appears, will rank in point of size with the other great lakes of the St. Lawrence, forming the sixth and last in the chain. Professor BELL has not yet been able to map the whole of his extensive survey, but thinks the area of Lake Nipigon will be found to exceed that of Lake Ontario, or even Lake Erie—some 100 miles or more of coast line having been traversed. The great lake is drained by the Nipigon River, an upward continuation of the St. Lawrence from Lake Superior, which is described as a very large clear river, about thirty miles in length. Upon this a dense growth of white pine, of an average diameter of 4 feet, is found on its sides. We understand that one of the most striking features in the geography of this beautiful lake, is the immense quantity of islands which are scattered throughout its whole extent, and possess a great variety in size, form and elevation. It appears that the whole region is of a highly interesting and important character. Have been made, and that, contrary to common belief, a large extent of level land with deep and fertile soil exists in the Nipigon country. Professor BELL has received instructions, in addition to his geological explorations to obtain as much information as possible in regard to the route to our great Western territory, and his observation in this direction are, perhaps, not the least important of the results of the expedition. If we are not mistaken he has found that this country, so far from being a difficult one, offers great facilities for the construction of a road. Further, he has, we believe, ascertained that the elevation of Lake Nipigon above Lake Superior is very moderate, and consequently this lake may be found useful for the purposes of navigation in the proposed direction. It will, of course, require considerable time to elaborate for publication all the geological data obtained in the survey, but it is to be hoped that a special report on the engineering capabilities of the country will be obtained as soon as possible, inasmuch as it is desirable to have all the information available

The Last Sheaf of Anna Mundell.

From the Washington Star, Nov. 12.

The venerable and beloved citizen named above died this morning, after a protracted illness, at the age of 81. The present generation of our city will remember him only as the mild-looking white-haired Christian gentleman, conspicuous in every good work and deed of benevolence, but old men among us call him to mind as one of the most conspicuous figures in the stormy party times of forty years ago.

His dying moments were peaceful and quiet, he retaining consciousness to the last. Until 12 o'clock last night he s'ept very well, but after that seemed more restless. He awoke shortly before sunrise this morning, and requested that the blinds of his room be opened, in order that he might see the sun rise, the sight of which he seemed to enjoy. About 6 o'clock he began to breathe heavier, and it was evident that the end was near. His family were gathered around the bedside, of whom he took affectionate leave, and expired about 8:30 o'clock, his last audible words being "Joy! Joy!"

When he first awoke this morning he seemed somewhat confused, evidently thinking that he was about to start on a journey, as he cautioned his daughter, Mrs. STICKNEY, to hasten with the packing of the trunks or they would be late for the train. He soon brightened up, however, and was perfectly rational until the last. He has been entirely resigned for several weeks past, having taken leave of his family about three weeks ago, and constantly prayed that the Lord would soon call him home, though begged for grace to be resigned until it should be the will of Almighty God to take him.

Mrs. STICKNEY, approaching his bedside yesterday, asked him if all was clear! To which he replied, "Yes, yes, all is clear; all is clear."

Mr. KENDALL has been in bad health for some time past, and very infirm. He caught cold while on a trip to the Adirondacks, which was followed, on his return to Washington, by a sort of bilious fever, but the main cause of his death seems to have been from exhaustion of the digestive organs and the effects of old age.

Greenbacks, Not Coin, Wanted.

From the Sacramento (Cal.) Union, Nov. 4.

A notice has been issued by the Central Pacific Railroad Company to its agents—a copy of it being posted at the ticket office of the passenger depot in this city—directing that on and after Nov. 1 all freight charges and ticket rates payable in currency will be receivable only in currency. Coin will not be accepted at any figure. People designing to go East will bear this fact in mind. If by any accident they delay applying for tickets until a few moments before the departure of trains, and have not the greenbacks to tender, they will have to remain over twenty-four hours, or else pay train rates, which will greatly increase the expense.

Wyllys Warner, M. A.

From the New-Haven Journal, Nov. 12.

Our citizens were startled yesterday morning by the intelligence of the sudden and altogether unexpected death of Mr. WYLLYS WARNER, Secretary of Yale College, which occurred at Chicago Thursday morning. It appears that on Friday last he received a telegram from his son-in-law, LYMAN BAIRD, Esq., notifying him that his presence there was required on business connected with the estate of the late Prof. OLMSTEAD. Saturday evening he suffered a return of symptoms of heart disease, and consulted his family physician as to the safety of his making such a journey. He was advised that there was no reason to apprehend that any injury would be caused—or the climax of the disease hastened by the trip—that it was quite as likely to prove beneficial. Accordingly, Mr. WARNER left here Monday noon, in company with his daughter, and, taking a car, reached Chicago Tuesday night. Next day he appeared to be in his usual health, and nothing unusual was observed in his appearance until Thursday forenoon, when, soon after entering Mr. BAIRD's office, he fell to the floor and expired almost immediately. Yesterday, no communication could be reached with his friends in Chicago, and it is expected that the remains of the deceased will arrive here to-day. Mr. WARNER was in his 70th year, and had been identified with Yale College for more than forty years, a great part of the time as Treasurer, and at the time of his death held the office of Secretary. He was the agent selected to raise the first $100,000 in aid of the College, and has ever been warmly devoted to its interests. By his unimpeachable character, genial manners and amiable temper, he attached to himself many warm friends, who will deeply regret his death.

Arrival of Miss Rye at Quebec with Seventy Small Children.

From the Montreal Witness, Nov. 12.

Miss RYE, bringing with her a batch of ten girls and seventy children immigrants, arrived at Quebec, by the steamship Siberian from Liverpool, on Tuesday. The ten girls, with the exception of two who came to Sherbrooke, Montreal, passed to Upper Canada. The seventy children, the majority of whom are females, are of an average age of seven years. A number of them are not more than three years old, and a few about 10. A widow woman and two children were also brought out by Miss RYE, who passed through Montreal yesterday with her charge from Fort Levi on her way up West. The seventy children are either orphans or the children of poor and destitute parents. The old jail at Niagara having been purchased and fitted up as a sort of orphanage, some 40 of the above children will be sent there, the others going from Montreal. On the voyage out, none of her party were sick beyond ordinary sea-sickness, and all landed at Quebec in the best of health and spirits.

Letter from Senator Sherman.

Hon. JOHN SHERMAN of Ohio, has written the following reply to an invitation to attend the Georgia State Fair at Macon:

MANSFIELD, Ohio, Oct. 28, 1869.

DEAR SIR: I have been postponing for a long time an answer to your invitation to attend the Georgia State Fair at Macon, on the 16th of November next, with the sincere hope that I might be able to accept it; but it is now manifest that I will not be able to leave here in time to do so. I desire very much to visit not only your State, but all the Gulf and cotton States, to learn by actual observation the great resources of that very important section of our common country. The heat and animosity growing out of the institution of slavery for a long time prevented one of my temperament from doing so with satisfaction, but now I find that the changed condition of affairs no reason exists why I could not do so. My earnest wish is to contribute in every way possible to the development and prosperity of the South. For that purpose it is a public duty to study your resources so as to become acquainted with your wants—the character and inclinations of your people, and especially their productions and employments. Nearly all the public men of this section have confined their visits to the East or the West, and we only know of the cultivation of cotton and rice as we do of tea and coffee by what we read and see by what we see. Your State Fair would give me the excellent opportunity to learn many things, and I regret my inability to attend it. I hope, however, to pass through the South before the meeting of Congress, and if I do so will be very happy to meet you at Savannah. I am truly yours,

JOHN SHERMAN.

The Troy Laundresses and Collar Makers and A. T. Stewart.

The Troy collar makers and laundresses, after a long contest with their employers for higher wages, established a "Cooperative Laundry," with the view of competing with their late masters. They failed, however, in getting sufficient work to keep the laundry in operation, and at last determined to establish a manufactory for the purpose of raising enough dollars and cents to keep the hundreds of hungry mouths they carried out were excellent, and agents were engaged to sell the same to New-York houses. As the society offered the collars and cuffs at nearly twenty per cent. below the market rates, it was thought a ready sale would be found; but such was not the case. Many New-York merchants expressed themselves in favor of cooperation, and refused to support any society waging a war with capitalists. Others were afraid to say, believing the cooperative shop but a transient institution, and stating, should they be compelled to deal again with the large manufacturers, the latter would make them pay dearly for assisting the Troy operators. The trade societies were appealed to, and tickets were issued and distributed among the various labor unions, each ticket representing a certain number of collars. Either the workingmen do not use collars, or there is a large supply on hand, for the tickets remained unsold, and the Troy girls found they had a large stock on hand which they could not dispose of.

The leaders in the Troy movement at last decided to make an arrangement with some merchant to place the goods in the market, and it is now announced that A. T. STEWART has contracted to take all the collars, &c., the girls can make, and pay for them as received. As stated above, the society can undersell any manufacturer, the members not caring about profits if they can sell enough to keep themselves employed. It remains for A. T. STEWART, with his keen eye for business, no doubt appreciates this point.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

[illegible]

PATRICK MCCAFFERTY, 60 years of age, and residing at No. 700 East Twelfth-street, fell down stairs at his residence Saturday night, and received injuries from which he died yesterday. Coroner DONNELLY held an inquest, and a verdict of accidental death was rendered.

The body of a child supposed to have been stillborn was found Saturday night in the cellar way of No. 309 Sixth-avenue, and taken to the Twenty-ninth Precinct Station House. The Coroner was notified, and the case will be fully investigated.

At an early hour yesterday morning a fight occurred in the saloon No. 8 Bowery, kept by MORRIS BROCKMAN, during which the proprietor stabbed one ROBERT LAKE in the hip, making a severe and dangerous wound. BROCKMAN was arrested and locked up in the Tenth Precinct Station House.

Wm. MCGUIRE, of No. 348 Greenwich-st., was attacked about 8 o'clock yesterday morning in Washington-street, near Watts, by a gang of rowdies, and was stabbed in the face, receiving a severe wound. His assailants escaped by [illegible] down Washington-street. While lying on the sidewalk, was taken to the Fifth Precinct Station House, where his wound was dressed, after which he was sent home.

About 5 o'clock yesterday morning an attempt was made to burn the tenement house, No. 10 Hamilton-street, by setting fire to the lower flight of stairs, which had been liberally covered with inflammable oil. The flames were fortunately discovered, and extinguished before they had gained any headway, or a great loss of life would have resulted from the crime, as the house is five stories high and crowded with tenants. This is suspected as the second attempt lately made to fire the premises.

Coroner SCHIRMER held an inquest yesterday at Bellevue Hospital in the case of THEODORE RICHEY, a laborer, 40 years of age, who had died from injuries received on the 7th of October by being buried under an embankment at the corner of Ninety-first-street and Ninety-fourth-street, where he was employed in digging a sewer. [illegible]

Saturday night THEODORE KELLEY, of No. 198 Washington-street, accompanied a woman whom he met in City Hall Park to a den in Williams-street, where she left him alone for a time, but presently returned with a man and the pair set upon KELLY, beating him terribly and stealing from him his watch and money. Knocked down, he was a pocketbook in consequence, and the thieves kicked him into the street. Subsequently the man was arrested, and being arraigned yesterday before Justice DOWLING, gave the name of JOHN MARSHALL, and was committed for trial.

A Thanksgiving Appeal.

The friends of St. Barnabas' House will do well not to forget its needs for Thanksgiving Day. It is hoped to provide on that day, as in former years, a dinner for the hundreds who attend the schools, and the many worthy poor who surround the mission. During the past year 17,094 lodgings have been given to homeless women, and 72,187 meals supplied at this House to the famishing poor of our City. Donations in money or provisions will make glad many hearts on this occasion. Offerings should be sent to St. Barnabas' House, No. 304 Mulberry-street, or inform the officers by letter, and the articles will be sent for.

Slave Western Nonsense.

At a meeting of Fenians held yesterday at the Armory of the Fourth Regiment of the Fenian Brotherhood in West Fourth-street, the officers promised the men an immediate opportunity of exercising their military prowess in the field. Much enthusiasm was manifested, and a number of names were added to the roll.

MONDAY, Nov. 15—A. M.

The general trade of the past week was rather above the average for the month of November, though the falling off in the sales of Foreign Imports and Domestic Commission Goods is sensibly felt as we advance to the Winter season. On the other hand the Domestic Exports from this market and the Export movement of cotton from the Southern markets are more important than the corresponding month of last year, and although Gold has fallen to a point that might otherwise attract its export as a medium for settling Foreign balances, the supply of Merchant bills on Europe at rates within the Gold shipping point, is more than ample for the whole demand. The Treasury sold $3,600,000 Gold last week, and will sell $3,000,000 additional to the close of the month, which, in the present condition of the Foreign Exchanges, should further reduce the premium, and would no doubt do so but for some uncertainty as to whether the Secretary will continue his sales beyond $1,000,000 fortnightly to supply the regular Sinking Fund, after the meeting of Congress. The business in the Gold Room is reduced to what may be called a regular trade or banking demand and supply, there being but little disposition shown to speculate in either direction. It is still insisted that an effort is to be made to revive the system of clearances which so disastrously exploded on the 24th September, through the Gold Exchange Bank, with a Capital reduced nearly one-half by its recent losses. But whether this is to result in a more systematic experiment of no real significance to result [illegible] upon a much larger, and locate [illegible] in the regular [illegible] Gold Room. The [illegible] Gold Room [illegible] the entire State [illegible] New-York Central and Northwest Connections [illegible] the Railways. The particular cause of the heavy fall since Friday morning in Pacific Mail is supposed to be the hopelessness of further Quarterly Dividends for the present, but the circumstance that the November Dividend is likely to be passed should have created no great surprise, after the great diversion of the business with California to the Pacific Railways.

The Public Funds and the Foreign Exchanges left off on Friday's quotations; 115¾ for 6-20s of 1867, and 105⅝@106 for Bills on London.

After the late Boards the following quotations were made, as compared with Friday night:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The Bishop of London, yesterday, delivered the funeral sermon on the late GEORGE PEABODY, at Westminster Abbey, as previously announced. The edifice was filled by an immense congregation, who listened to the discourse with deep emotion.

Two additional regiments of cavalry are to be added to the garrison at Paris. Another large demonstration was made in that city on Friday night in honor of ROCHEFORT, but the people were not disturbed by the police.

The Spanish Government, it is said, have received a dispatch from Florence, in which it is stated that the Italian Cabinet favor the project of making the Duke of GENOA King of Spain.

The Bishop of Havana has been arrested at Cadiz.

Senor ORENSE, the Republican Deputy, lately arrested at Madrid, has been unconditionally released, and has gone to France. It is reported that the Government intends to release all the political prisoners now under arrest.

GEORGE PEABODY, just before his death, made an additional donation of $150,000 to the Peabody Fund in aid of the London poor.

GENERAL.

Yesterday morning a collision occurred on the Western Pacific Railroad, near San Leandro, Cal., between the Eastern bound train and Almeda Ferry train, by which a number of passenger cars were demolished and driven into each other, and from ten to fifteen passengers killed and from thirty to fifty wounded. The collision occurred during a thick fog, and while the trains were going at the rate of twenty miles an hour. The disaster cast a gloom over the City of San Francisco, as the announcement of it was read from the pulpits of the churches.

Our Washington correspondent furnishes this morning the continuation of the diplomatic correspondence on the Alabama claims, from the point at which the history of the negotiations printed in the TIMES in July last closed, down to the 10th of May, when Mr. REVERDY JOHNSON retired from the office of United States Minister to England.

A barn at Jonnson Corner, in Epsom, N. H., was destroyed by fire on Friday night, and eight horses belonging to the contractor on the Suncook Valley Railroad were burned to death.

WILLIAM H. BOOTH, an old man aged 81 years, committed suicide by shooting himself on Friday, at the Home for Aged Men in Baltimore, Md.

A large tannery at Gorham, Me., was partially destroyed by fire on Saturday night. Loss, $60,000; insurance, $21,000. The "Republican Wigwam," a large frame building in Chicago, was burned on Saturday, it is supposed by the hand of an incendiary. Loss, $40,000; insurance, $21,000. The same evening the flour mill of JACOB LAIDY, Cleveland, Ohio, was also destroyed by fire. Loss, $40,000; insurance, $22,000.

The Stock Board in Chicago completed its organization on Saturday, by the election of Mr. C. B. GOODYEAR, President, and other officers. The Board begins with a membership of seventy bankers, brokers and real estate dealers.

A snow-storm began at Hartford, Conn., yesterday morning, and continued through the day.

A fire in Baltimore, Md., on Friday night, damaged a building, owned by MOSES WASHINGFIELD, to the extent of $10,000, and destroyed property of the occupants to the amount of $60,000. The losses are covered by insurance.

The desire of the Louisville Commercial Convention has been carried out by Ex-President FILLMORE, to the extent of naming two of the six persons to attend the Russian Exhibition of 1870, and to arrange for the proper representation of the products of the United States, leaving to President GRANT the appointment of the remaining four. Samples of cotton, tobacco, wheat, corn, rice, sugar, &c., may be sent to Messrs. Boorman, New-York, or to Colonel BILLON, Director-of-Museum of Statistics, St. Louis, who are in active communication with our Minister in St. Petersburg and with the Russian authorities.

BENJAMIN SHELDON, the ticket agent of the Central Railway at Tonawanda, was killed on Saturday while attempting to get on the cars at Buffalo.

THOMAS HALLIGAN was struck by the New-York Express train coming east on the Central Railroad on Saturday afternoon, while he was crossing the track at the Rice depot, and instantly killed. He was watching the western-bound train when struck by the express. His body was thrown some distance into a ditch.

The trouble between the male and female medical students in Philadelphia appears to be ended. On Saturday 140 of the former and thirty-nine of the latter attended the clinical lecture at the hospital, and no disturbance occurred.

CHARLES BARRETT, a lad of 14 years, was arrested on Friday night, while in the act of throwing stones at a train entering New-Haven. This malicious practice has resulted in severe injury to several passengers at New-Haven and Hartford, within two or three weeks, and a reward of $100 has been offered by Superintendent RUSS.

Rev. ISAAC E. SMITH, on trial at Geneva, Ill., for the murder of his wife by drowning her, has been acquitted.

LOCAL.

The first stone of the new Post Office building was laid Saturday afternoon in the southwest corner of the area, under the direction of the Superintendent, builder, masons and employes.

An examination was commenced before a United States Commissioner, on Saturday, in the case of ROBERTS MULLIGAN and JAMES CALDWELL, charged with being implicated in the drawback conspiracy, by means of which the Government was defrauded out of several hundred thousand dollars. District-Attorney PHELPS-PONT, conducted the prosecution. Testimony and documentary evidence were produced for the purpose of showing MULLIGAN's complicity in the frauds. After the adjournment of the case FRANCIS A. HOWARD, formerly a clerk in the Revenue Department at Washington, was brought before the Commissioner in charge of a Deputy Marshal, and was held in $15,000 bail to appear for examination on a charge of being concerned in the frauds.

Considerable excitement exists at Centre Moriches at the sudden disappearance of a young lady, EMMA VAN WICKLE, a resident of that village, from her home on Friday last, since when no tidings of her have been received. As she left her clothing and other effects behind, it is feared that she has committed suicide or been foully dealt with.

Hon. HENDERSON GAYLORD, Treasurer of the Avondale Fund, has acknowledged receipt of $7,322 12, the sum received by Mayor KALBFLEISCH for that fund.

A hostler named JOSEPH BURRE, who has been employed in the family of Mr. FRENE VAN WAGONER, in Manchester, N. J., ran off on Friday with his master's horse and carriage, $600 in money, and one of the servant girls. The fugitives are believed to be in New-York.

The Central Park meteorological report for the last week sets forth the following facts and figures: Barometer, mean, 29.789 inches; maximum at 10 A. M. Nov. 12, 30.028 inches; minimum at 12 M. Nov. 7, 29.420 inches; range, .608 of an inch. Thermometer, mean, 51 degrees; maximum at 3 P. M. Nov. 13, 66 degrees; minimum at 6 P. M. Nov. 9, 36.2 degrees; range, 15.8 degrees. There was no rain during the week.

The Fenian Amnesty.

When will the English Government have done with its pettiness on the Fenian amnesty question? What a contrast does it present to the prompt, broad, bold policy of this Republic toward its rebels, and how little to justify the difference!

The Fenian rebels did not number as many scores as our rebels did hundreds of thousands. They spilled comparatively no blood, and did comparatively no injury. Their resistance, so far from taking the shape of a belligerent force, never rose above the scale of a village shindy. As for the cause, the Irish, according to the admission of English statesmen themselves, had a multitude of wrongs, past and present, to exasperate them. Our Southern rebels had no cause at all, except that involved in their trying to perpetuate the most gigantic iniquity of the age. But here the British Government, half a year after the last dust of their little brawl has settled, stands trembling and paltering at the petition for a little mercy toward a calaboose full of young Fenian hotbloods. On the other hand, our Government, two years before the close of its rebellion, while its enemies were yet pouring in their hot cannonades from the ocean to the Mississippi, volunteered full pardon and amnesty to all who would return to duty; and Congress no sooner met, after the firing of the last gun, than it busied itself in supplementing that amnesty with yet more liberal concessions. This course of clemency and lenity has gone on ever since, acquiring only additional sweep and steadiness with the lapse of time; until now it has settled into one of the most fixed and least questioned policies of the Government, and the most guilty chiefs of the rebellion trust to its protecting force without the slightest misgiving.

This grudging spirit of the English Government is the more singular, because so entirely inconsistent with its other work of pacification. It has been the declared purpose of the Gladstone Administration to still the chronic Irish agitation by a more liberal and just treatment. That was the great controlling reason assigned for the tremendous move of disestablishing the Irish Church. For the Ministry to stop now in its work of conciliation is to leave a reform half developed, mishaven and abortive—the worst of all possible policies;—a reform fraught with the evils of change, and not a single benefit—a reform depriving the Government of the foundation of prescription without substituting the foundation of reason and the public good—a reform which would unsettle establishments without quieting agitation—a reform by which the people would be at once encouraged and exasperated—encouraged by the sense of their own importance and the evident effect of their power, and exasperated because what they had obtained was not what they demanded. If this amnesty is persistently held back, we look to see Irish agitation more persistently continued. The agitators who would otherwise soon sink back to obscurity will become more active and powerful than ever; till at last all attempt to restore quiet, whether by conciliation or coercion, will alike become a mockery, and Ireland, perhaps, be again reduced to its revolutionary condition in 1848 and in 1798. In this age none but bad Governments—heartless tyrannies—stand in need of such desperate and cruel expedients as long incarcerations for the offence of opposition. Our own Republic has not yet only the nobler but the wiser example in dealing in the spirit of forgiveness. Many European monarchies have taken this example to heart, and are even now profiting by it. That the freest and best of these all should alone hesitate, is an anomaly which we hope will soon be ended, both for its own sake and that of its victims.

Municipal Commentaries.

If anybody knows what has become of the great Cab Company, which was long ago this to have had our streets swarming with cheap well-appointed Hansom cabs,—or of the still more celebrated Underground Railroad Company, which was by this time to have put the Central Park within fifteen delightful minutes of Wall-street,—or of the Pneumatic Express Company, which was to have superseded the City expresses and City letter delivery by shooting mail matter and parcels about in every direction by the aid of a vacuum and compressed air,—or of the local Telegraph Company, which was to have carried the telegraph, so to speak, to every street, and rendered conversation between wives up town and husbands down town, during the busy hours, one of the cheapest and most accessible of luxuries,—or of the great Oxygenated Gas Company, which was to furnish everybody with means of getting the light of ten burners, such as we now use, out of one burner, and a far whiter purer light at that, and thus reduce the gas companies to poverty and penitence,—or of the great Blot Club, which was to furnish business men with Paris cookery down town at prices that would drive the restaurant keepers mad,—he will confer a favor by communicating to us such information as he may have at his disposal. We do not suppose the fate of all these enterprises has been the same, or that all enjoyed the same chance of success; but, on the other hand, we have not enumerated one-half of the promising schemes for the promotion of public comfort and convenience which, after having delighted the City for a week or two, have suddenly disappeared, leaving not a trace behind. Had they been every one carried out, New-York would by this time be about on a level with the principal European capitals of inferior wealth and population. Not one of them having been carried out, it remains one of the largest and richest cities on the globe, and that which for its size possesses fewest of the material attractions for residents. In fact, except for gas, Croton water, and flagged sidewalks, and the near neighborhood of a great mass of his fellow-creatures, one might as well live in the country.

Twenty years ago, we were, in the matter of contrivances for the promotion of comfort in city life, somewhat ahead of Europeans. We had invented the large hotels, with their fixed charges, their absence of extras, their magnificent and well-served tables, and thoroughly business management, without respect of persons; we had the street cars, running smoothly on rails at low rates, and giving comfortable accommodation to high and low; we had the baggage express system, and we had plenty of pure water, brought into everybody's house, and we had a respectable Municipal Government. Since then, however, it can hardly be said that we have added anything whatever to the list of our municipal conveniences, and those we had have been running down in quality, while Paris and London, and other European capitals, have been making splendid additions to their stock of city conveniences. Indeed, it has been for some years the habit of our Press, when desirous of having a crow over their European contemporaries, to point exultingly to the baggage checks on the railroads, and the means of communication with the engine driver afforded by the rope,—two items in which undoubtedly the advantage is with us. But then they are, though highly important, no very splendid additions to the comforts of everyday life, and are certainly not things to warrant a great people in resting on their laurels. Few of us ever have occasion to communicate with the engine driver, and although the advantages of being able to check your baggage to your destination, and afterward, by a transfer of your check, have it conveyed to your house or hotel, are incontestable and obvious, it is hardly sufficient to satisfy all one's longings in the matter of material comforts. Moreover, as regards the City express, there is no European who cannot get himself, as well as his baggage, conveyed to his own door for about the sum we pay for the carriage of a single valise over the same distance. Forty cents will carry two persons and a trunk, in either Paris or London, over almost as great a distance as separates any of our dwellings in New-York from the principal railway stations. A striking illustration of the way in which enterprise has died out among us in these matters, is the failure of the express companies, after so many years of patronage and prosperity, to add anything whatever to their machinery. For instance, few families in New-York or any other American city, can command the services of an able-bodied man, although Americans use the largest and heaviest trunks of any people in the world. The express companies persist in sending one man with the baggage, to lug it down in the hall, when in nine cases out of ten the owner would joyfully pay an extra quarter at least to have it carried up stairs,—a job which the expressman generally scornfully declines, and indeed is not often equal to. An extra man sent with each wagon would not only, therefore, enormously increase the value of the institution, but earn a good living for himself and some profit for his employers.

Another illustration of this same indifference to progress and improvement is shown in the practice of the gas companies in lighting the street lamps. For long years, the lamps in European cities have been lighted by thrusting up into the lamps a shaded torch, the movement which raises the valves at the bottom of the lamp also turning on the gas, the operation being literally quick as a flash. Here labor is far dearer than in Europe, and yet it is only recently the Manhattan Company has begun to use the torch-bearer. The Metropolitan Gas Company still sends round a man with a ladder, which he sticks intelligently up in the dark, gets a match out of his vest pocket, scrutinizes it as the light flickers, and then, opening on the gas with the hand, lights up with the other—the process taking about three times as long as the new one, and carrying all who see it irresistibly back, not exactly to the middle ages, but to the early part of the century.

We have made, it is true, a great deal of progress in restaurants, largely owing to the labors of DELMONICO, but little or none in hotel accommodation, except in the direction of increased bigness. The same sacrifice of comfort to gaudy splendor is still made which marked the earlier essays. There is as little attempt made as ever to provide for individual tastes or wants, except, perhaps, in the growing substitution of the "European plan" for that scene of disorder, gluttony and waste known as the table d'hôte, and in the introduction of the elevators. The style of furniture has in no respect improved, nor has anything been done for silence, or for ventilation, or attendance, or politeness. The large hotels might, if they pleased, readily introduce the cab system in the teeth of every opposition, instead of which they league with livery-stable keepers in imposing the expensive two-horse carriage on their customers, and sending them to and from the railroad stations in the antique "stage," which succeeded the post horse a century ago.

The worst feature of all is our condition, however, is the habit into which the projectors of new enterprises for our comfort have of "selling out" as soon as they get a charter, or in fact complete any organization. They excite public expectation, and make just enough noise to frighten somebody who is interested in keeping things as they are, and, this done, the parties speedily come to terms. The great cab companies sell out to the old livery-stable keepers, the oxygenated gas men sell out to the old gas companies, the underground railroad men sell out to the overground railroad men, and the pneumatic express men to the horse express men, the French cooks to the Irish cooks, and so on.

The Monopolists and the Coal Question.

The defenders of the coal monopoly deny that any benefit to consumers of Nova Scotia coal would follow a repeal of the duty. Let us see whether this logic will hold water. The price of any natural product to the consumer depends, first, upon the cost of its production, and, secondly, upon the cost of its distribution; provided always that there is no monopoly or artificial restraint upon either. The average cost to the consumer is governed by the cost of labor expended upon it during these two processes, and the profit upon the capital employed. A further fixed charge—and in the case of Nova Scotia coal the duty is that fixed charge—must fall on the consumer. The price of that coal, before the lapse of the Reciprocity Treaty brought the duty into force, was $4 25 to $4 50 per ton, in gold, and contracts can be made for the same price now, excluding the duty. The highest price asked for coal by the Nova Scotia General Mining Company during the last fifteen years has been $9 50, or equal to $2 40 United States coin, and the lowest $2, equal to $1 94.

It is further affirmed that the duty has helped to make and operate a good many miles of railroad. No doubt of it, and that is one of the strongest arguments against the system which now exists. The duty has rendered necessary transportation of coal to markets which, if left without Government interference, could have supplied themselves. That is to say, the Atlantic coast is forced to pay for labor which, left alone, it would not need. The truth is, that the only bituminous coal transported to tide water is carried either by the Pennsylvania Railroad and its branches or by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and much of it is far beyond the reach of competition from Nova Scotia. Nor can these great roads pretend that they depend in any way for their prosperity upon this business, especially when we consider that they charge for freight only one-half that charged upon the cheapest cereals. If these corporations will bring these cereals from the Ohio Valley to the seaboard at the same freight charge as that upon coal, they will not only enhance their revenues, but confer a real benefit upon the country.

It is claimed by the monopolists that the repeal of the duty would arrest the development of the coal fields of Middle Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and the Southern States. Were there no other refutation of this error, another assertion which they make would be sufficient. For when they admit, as they do, that the duty only affects points lying within a hundred miles of the seaboard, they flatly contradict themselves. But leaving these opposite statements to be reconciled by others, the objections to the duty may be briefly summed up as follows: It increases the price of a prime necessary of life, and the source of that power which enters more and more into all industries, and upon the growth of which prosperity and civilization depend. It is a tax which is unjust because of its unequal assessment. The whole burden of it is borne by but a a small portion of the country—New-York, New-Jersey, and the New-England States.

Take the case of one of the largest and most successful iron manufactories in Pennsylvania. It is situated where nature offers her wealth of rich coal, good iron and limestone; is on a fine line of transportation, and near the head of navigation of the main eastern branch of the Mississippi—a region where iron will be profitably manufactured long after iron and coal shall have ceased to be protected. In making a ton of finished iron, its owner uses perhaps four tons of coal, delivered at his own door at about $1 75, and so adds about $7 to the value of the iron. Suppose, however, that to this cost of manufacture were added the tax of $1 75 (currency) which the Portland or Boston iron-master, who uses bituminous coal, must pay—would not the question of taxing Nova Scotia coal appear in a new light? And this is an exact statement of the case: for the iron mills of the Atlantic coast are on which alone accrue the emoluments of the tax paid by the iron mills in the Ohio and its tributaries. The bare statement of this fact is a sufficient reply to the charge of "malevolence" against those who only desire to see fair play.

The Erie Strike Again.

The Erie strike, instead of being "trampled out" by the warlike demonstrations of the managers, backed by their subsidized portion of roughs, seems to be extending and growing more formidable. The engineers of the road, who at first stood wholly aloof from the brakemen, now fear that they may be gradually drawn into the vortex, despite their own efforts. One of them publicly expressed sympathy with the brakemen, the other day, and made a speech saying he hoped they would get their rights. For this expression of opinion, which is very much like what he might have heard, and doubtless did hear, from a great many other people, he was discharged. There was no pretence that he was not a competent man, and a good engineer; but he did not bow to the law of might, and off went his head. That his own comrades became alarmed, and some of them indignant, is but natural.

We now see it reported, as one of the latest phases of this Erie trouble, that

"Mr. FISK, having addressed a note to Chief POWERS, of the Jersey City Police force, requesting him to detail twenty-five men to Port Jervis to preserve the peace there, the Chief sent the men Friday morning."

Port Jervis is in New-York State; and what jurisdiction the Chief of the Jersey Police force has in New-York State, "to preserve the peace there," is past comprehension. We have not heard that there was any trouble in Orange County, N. Y., requiring the intervention of New-Jersey Police; but even if there were, what right the latter officials have to interpose their authority it is difficult to make out. What right an Erie director had to employ New-Jersey Police in that locality it is still more difficult to see; and it would be a serious matter for him to use New-York Police to carry out his purposes in reference to his railroad and its troubles.

The pith of the matter is, that we have here another manifestation of that reckless spirit in Erie management which proceeds on the doctrine that "might makes right;" which defies law and laughs at statute; which uses all means to gain an end, and which treats public order and the rights of communities with contempt.

But this is not all. Independent of infringements of law, the sympathies of the people are outraged by these violent procedures. The brakemen already discharged are numbered by hundreds; if joined by the engineers, the strikers will be numbered by thousands. These men are not of the class of roughs who are employed to awe them, and to take their occupations from them, but are mainly industrious and law-abiding citizens. Many of them have their homes along the road, and are respected in the various towns and villages where they reside. Hitherto the Erie Road, with all its bad management and neglect, has been enabled, partly by reason of the abundant employment it furnished, to at least retain the good will and liking of the population whom its way trains served, and through whose neighborhood it ran. Now, however, it risks forfeiting even this local good will. It takes steps whose tendency is to stir up hostilities among those whose interest has made them look upon the road with favor. It defies public sentiment in those localities. It doubly defies that sentiment when vast bodies of the people in that neighborhood are not only suddenly deprived of employment, without effort at compromise or adjustment of differences, counting long and faithful service for nothing, but, in addition, the inexperienced, and, in some cases, the "rough" classes of New-York and surrounding cities are introduced to fill the vacant places.

And it is not only natural indignation but anxiety and alarm that will be stirred up by this riding rough shod over the people whose interests are involved. The position of a brakeman, still more of an engineer, is of the highest importance to the security of life and property. The Erie is not so famous for safe travel that it can afford to increase the hazards of daily transit. People will look with apprehension upon this violent method of settling internal quarrels, without taking the public interest into account, or providing for the public safety. But the whole matter is of a piece with that reckless and daring disregard of public sentiment and the deliberate opinion of the community, to serve which all corporations are created, that distinguishes the present mismanagement of the Erie Road.

Degrees in Murder.

A question of great importance in the practice of criminal law has been at last decided by the Court of Appeals. It is nothing more than whether the greater includes the less in indictments for murder, and it came before the Court in the case of KEEFE vs. The People; the appellant, upon an indictment containing only the single count of murder, having been convicted of murder in the second degree. The point urged was, that the verdict and judgment entered upon it were erroneous, because the indictment did not set forth that at the time of the commission of the homicide the prisoner was in the commission of a felony, which is the statutory definition of the crime of murder in the second degree.

The Court, after an exhaustive examination of the point presented, has decided that under the statute, upon trial on an indictment for murder a conviction for a lesser degree of that crime is legal and proper where the acts alleged and proved are the same, although the indictment may not state the particular intent and circumstances required by the statute to constitute that lesser degree. All that is requisite is, that there shall be no material variation between the acts charged in the indictment and those established at the trial.

The conclusions of law and common sense are for once identical. The decision works no injury to the rights of accused persons, and will essentially serve the ends of justice. Especially will it be of great practical

The time has arrived for the primary meetings of the Republicans in this City. But our reporters have already informed the public that there is a total apathy in the party with reference to the candidates. The Republicans have "never come to the conclusion that it is useless to go to the polls." That is the sort of spirit which ruins great causes. Thousands of men satisfy their consciences with regard to their political duties by saying, "It is of no use for me to vote—I should be in a minority." Atlest these timid and dependent souls become so numerous that they would decide any issue if they would only unite and come forward. If everybody would only understand that to lie down on the ground and give up the battle is not the way to win in politics, any more than in other affairs of life, and that it is often a duty to fight the hardest when our prospects seem the darkest, the army of shameless would be reduced to a few straggler. Necessity will teach Republicans that lesson some day; if expediency does not.

When shall we have decent homes for the poor? We doubt whether people of very limited means are much worse off in any city than in this. The lowest class of tenement houses are—well, the public have known what they are for years past. We have our "sanitarians." Look at this one fact: a single block in the Sixth Ward has been found to contain recently 88 families, comprising 2,267 persons. It is believed that these families pay $60,000 a year for rent. The rooms, we are assured, are "unhealthy"—it would be a miracle if they were otherwise. Think of the circumstances under which the young grow up in these overcrowded rooms, without being cared for, or clothed, or protected from evil influences. And yet ladies complain that they have no "mission," and that there is nothing for them to do in the world. There is so much good to be accomplished within an inch of their noses that they could not fail to see it if they were less intent on talking of "revolutions" and blowing bubbles in the air.

It is a pity that public speakers seldom properly understand the quotations they make. We do not, of course, allude to classical quotations, because it is well settled that they are like the ornaments on a wedding cake—only meant for show. The speaker knows that his audience do not comprehend the classics, and the chances are that he has only borrowed them himself from some cheap—and nasty—hand book. But even plain English is a puzzle to some speakers. There is a very respectable gentleman, Mr. STEBBINS, of Detroit, who has been called to account by Professor FAWCET, for saying that one in twenty of the population in England has been reduced to pauperism by free trade. "I never said so!" cries Mr. STEBBINS, "I simply quoted from THE NEW-YORK TIMES." He is mistaken. He perhaps read in this journal a statement which was quoted from a speech made by a member of the new Anti-Free-Trade League in England, but we have nothing to do with it. We mentioned it, but stated the authority, and now Mr. STEBBINS saddles us with the whole responsibility of the assertion. It is not the illiterate man only who reads his newspaper upside down.

English Ministers of State are trained to such incessant occupation that they are miserable when every moment of their time is not occupied. As they are obliged to be present in Parliament for many hours together when they are not actually wanted, it is difficult to satisfy their craving for work. Reading or writing is not allowed within either House. Lord PALMERSTON, who was an exception to every rule, used to pull his hat over his eyes and go to sleep. But he must have slept with one eye and one ear open, for he was always ready with a sharp answer to every attack. Mr. DISRAELI sits and broods, with that fixed, unalterable melancholy on his countenance, which has led some of his opponents to nickname him "the Sphinx." "Bob" LOWE settles himself down to the quiet manufacture of perforations for his speeches. JOHN BRIGHT has enough to do to AVOID the crowds of people who wish to see him in the lobby. Mr. GLADSTONE fidgets about, makes endless notes on scraps of paper and tears them up, till he is surrounded with the litter, and then composes Greek verses. A recent English paper tells us that a gentleman condoled with Mr. GLADSTONE on his being so fully occupied. "Last night," replied the Premier, "we had a long debate, and I occupied the time in translating into Greek, as you see, the hymn, 'Rock of Ages.'" Perhaps he is the only English Premier who has chosen this method of filling up leisure moments.

A hideous custom seems to be springing up again. "A party of body snatchers," says a dispatch from Louisville, "visited the Methodist Cemetery last night, but were driven off by the sexton, who fired a volley, and badly wounded one of them." This is far from being the only story of the kind which has reached us lately. It is said, too, that the medical schools in England are beginning to find their "subjects" running short, and have set the old machinery at work. The churchyard is to be rifled, and the scenes which caused so much scandal in the early part of this century are to be refreshed. There are many men now living who have taken part in these nocturnal expeditions—some of them have attained eminence in the profession of medicine, and would be sorry enough to have their past exploits made known to the world. Is there no way of supplying the dissecting room without this horrible desecration of "God's acre?" At least the law must be rigorously put in force, if necessary, to keep inquiring anatomists from making a trade of outraging the dead.

"You can pay for it by installments." There is no greater temptation which the dealer in any kind of goods can lay before customers of a certain class than this. The wife or husband sees some furniture or clothes which the family much need, but they have not enough money to buy it outright. "Never mind," says the accommodating dealer, "pay me so much a week, and you shall have the goods at once." The offer is too seductive to be refused. All goes well until wife or child falls ill, or the husband loses his employment, and the "weekly installment" cannot be paid. If the inexperienced wish to know what happens then, let them ponder the story of "an elderly French lady and her daughter," which we have reported. The dealer sent three men to the house, and roughly demanded the balance of a claim. As they could not get the money they laid hold of the poor lady, pulled her out of the room, locked her up in another part of the house, and took away all the furniture. The widow only owed $40; and had paid $105 of the bill. Nevertheless, the dealer's agent stripped the house of everything. His counsel plead in his favor "that he had a wife and children to support"—small mercy had he himself shown to the fatherless and the widow! Justice DOWLING deserves the thanks of the public for dispensing strict justice in this [illegible] as being "milky down in Ireland," and that the quart in the above sign is priced for two months with a fine of ten. It is unfortunate that the principals of the firm could not be reached in client of their servant.

In SIDNEY SMITH's advice to his godchildren he addresses a few words to young women, to this effect: "Don't believe in anything but the parson and the ring! If your lover says that you can do as well without the form as with it, tell him he is a scoundrel." It would be better for girls everywhere if they would remember that hint. In the Duell divorce case the woman was told by the man that they might be married without any ceremony—married as easily as if "three sixty-mos" performed the service. The exponent of the law in this case, JOHN B. RUSSELL, of Brooklyn, took the girl a drive to Central Park one day, and put a ring on her finger, saying, "This is your wedding ring; we are married." Nothing could be simpler. Afterward they went to live in a boarding house, where RUSSELL naturally wedged the woman to be his wife. Who could not supply the finish to the story? Just before the wife became a mother, JOHN B. RUSSELL abandoned her. But in his interpretation of the law to his intended dupe he was nearer the truth than he supposed. Judge BARNARD has ruled that the marriage was really valid according to the laws of this State. "All that is requisite is that the parties should be capable of contracting, and that they should actually contract to be man and wife." Mr. RUSSELL, who made a defence which the Court stigmatized in very strong language, will have to make provision for the woman he says is "only" intended to seduce. So much for one side of reality—but we advise young women to take SIDNEY SMITH's counsel, and insist on having the parson and the ring at their wedding.

A story has recently been going the round of the papers to the glory of a great publishing house. An American author, "broken down utterly, by a lifetime of literary drudgery," fell into poverty, in a foreign land. He was 60 years of age. One day a troublesome malady seized him, and in vain did his wife and son seek shelter for his head. They "were repulsed at each place, none wanting a dying man on their hands." At last the Supreme Hand was kinder to the broken-hearted literary brother of ours than the world had been, and took him away—"poor, and in misery." His wife, left penniless, wandered a little further on her sad journey of life, and then she too laid herself down to die. These are the tragedies which fill the pages of literary biography. But it chanced that a passing stranger wrote to an eminent firm in New-York, describing the circumstances. The firm sent a check to the traveler to cover the expenses of a tombstone in the cemetery at Florence. It will be an encouragement to American authors to know that though they may lack bread while living, their publishers will nobly make them the present of a tombstone when they are dead. The brains of writers provide great mansions and immense wealth for publishers, but the fate of the author is too often to toil on in hopeless poverty. But then, is he not the inferior being?

There is a story told, we believe, in the Percy Anecdotes, how LOUIS XIV., at a banquet, said to a servant, "Take that dish (a gold cup) to DOMINICHINO." "And the partridges, too Sire?" exclaimed the favorite, with facetious politeness. "And the partridges too," said His Majesty, in reply. The Russian Minister CATACASY has just sent to MARTIN KLINKOFSTROM, Consul at San Francisco, an order to have a religious service performed in the Russian Chapel of that city, in sympathy with our American festival of Thanksgiving. Should MARTIN (of course) remember the above story, he might be likely to telegraph back to his principal, "And the turkey too?" To which Ambassador CATACASY would immediately reply, "And the turkey too?" The order, as it stands, is no doubt a very kindly and cordial one, but it may be admitted that the addition of the customary bird would give the compliment a very genial significancy, and bring it more home to the feelings of the general public.

Mr. BLISSERT, chairman of the tailors' meeting at Early Closing Hall, gave a very good account of the cooperative tailors in this City, who, though they commenced with only a few dollars are now getting on well, and making garments for the Fifth-avenue and other fashionable neighborhoods. Many would be disposed to quote the old Roman proverb in their favor; "Res ace laborant;" and we are happy to wish them all good success in plain English. Mr. BLISSERT very sensibly prefers the remedy of cooperation to that of "strikes," and is evidently right when he says that what our cooperative people need is chiefly education and discipline. The task before the cooperators is certainly an arduous one; but with the example of the English, French and Germans, they may find encouragement to persist in the good work they have undertaken.

The Passage of the Pereire.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Having noticed a letter from "H." in your columns, on the recent passage of the steamer Pereire from New-York to Brest, and also that of the Russia from this port to Queenstown in July, I think it not out of place to call attention to the passage of the City of Brussels, which left Sandy Hook on Oct. 20 at 2:10 P. M., and arrived at Queenstown Nov. 7, at 10 P. M., or eight days, five hours and fifty minutes apparent time.

Allowing that Brest is 121 miles further than Queenstown, it is certain that the City of Brussels would have gone that distance in ten and a half hours, which added to her actual performance, would make her time eight days, sixteen hours, twenty minutes, or fifteen minutes less than the Pereire. QUICK TIME.

[A letter from "M. J. E.," published yesterday, showed that the distance between Queenstown and Brest is really 202 miles—not 121, as published in the letter of "H." The 202 miles distance is, we are told, the average, as determined by three representative steamer connected with three competing lines, and may, therefore, be assumed to be correct. The credit claimed for the Pereire means, therefore, to be established, whether against the Russia or the City of Brussels.—TIMES.]

Lecture on Temperance by Hon. C. C. Leigh.

Last evening Hon. C. C. LEIGH lectured before Neptune Sons of Temperance, No. 5, at their hall in Grand-street. He said that the temperance cause had many opponents; among them were appetite, habit, the doctors, the rumsellers and our legislators. Of the strength of appetite and habit he need not speak. Of the doctors, he said, he found many of them knew little of the art of healing. Why they prescribed alcoholic stimulants to their patients, he could not understand, unless they did it to pander to their patients' appetites. Of our legislators we had nothing to hope. They had tried repeatedly to repeal our Excise law and to give our 5,000 rum sellers the right to vend their poisons night and day. He feared that the next Legislature would so modify the Excise law as to render it almost a dead letter. The time would come, however, when the people would have a voice in the matter, and then rumselling would not receive legal sanction.

Several of the churches on the eastern side of the city have been imposed upon, within the past few months, by a pretender named Penna, who pretended himself into the confidence of good people for the purpose of motives. He was arrested a few days ago and taken to the Essex Market Police Court for an examination of character, and but for the intervention of an individual he would have been cons

PROGRESS OF MORMONISM AMONG US.

A Curious Defence of Polygamy.

Sermon by a Newly-Arrived Elder from Utah.

There was a large assemblage of Latter-day Saints at the Free Church (Mormon) in Brooklyn, E. D., yesterday afternoon, on the occasion of a sermon by Elder THEODORE CURTIS of Salt Lake City, who arrived here on Saturday night. Many of those present were young and handsome Welsh girls, besides a number of persons who had just come from England, and who are waiting here for an opportunity to pursue their journey to the "valley of the mountains."

Elder POTTS, on Bleecker-st., and the presiding officer, received the brethren and sisters as they entered, and to each extended a cordial welcome, conducting the women to seats in the body of the church, and the elders, of whom there were more than a score, to seats upon a raised dais, on which was also the reading desk.

Previous to the sermon the Communion was administered, bread and water being used, and the congregation singing all the while their peculiar religious songs. Elder POTTS arose, and made a few remarks upon the spirit in which the Sacrament should be taken, advising all who were not imbued with its lines of universal love and peace to abstain until they were in that frame of mind. Calling two elders, he directed one to bless the bread and the other the water, which they did, being some such formula as that employed in the Episcopal Church. They each took a piece of bread, which was cut up into small pieces and carried it around the church to every member, who took a piece. Qualices containing water were then handed to the congregation.

At the conclusion of the Communion, Elder CURTIS was introduced. He said, in opening, that he felt it necessary to apologize for appearing in his travel-stained attire, but owing to mismanagement on the part of the railway lines his luggage had not got to New-York quickly as he. He was aware how much effect vulgar ridicule and threat had to do with the success of a speaker, but he thought it was unnecessary for one who came in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ to preach His word and spread the glad tidings of the redemption to cave for the more glittering world's choice and gift of oratory. The truth was strong, and its testimony, with the Divine help, did not need any garnish. He said he was a stranger to this community of brethren and sisters, and knowing this to be a free church, could not tell how many of the faithful were unbelieving scoffers. His audience in this occasion, therefore, he would, for the especial benefit of the latter, explain some of the Mormon doctrines, which essentially differed from those of the Christian, especially that of polygamy. Years ago he had been a member of the Methodist Church, and had looked upon his way then as the right way to Heaven, but the day came when he found that he had been groping about in darkness. In the year 1827 the first ray of light dawned upon him, and he became a Mormon. He was so privileged, he said, by his Heavenly Father to see and enjoy the blest reality for which kings and prophets prayed and waited. Christians ask what "reality" is this? The answer is the true gospel. Have not we then the true gospel, they ask? Yes, if the Bible be true, it is our gospel. Look at the number of different sects and churches in direct antagonism to each other who profess to follow the same Master, to be Christians, to be guided by and to preach the same gospel. Do they do it? No. This disunity shows them to be in error. Is it not self-evident that there is but one God, one faith, and one baptism; then must there be but one true Church, and that Church is the Mormon, because we alone understand and preach the true gospel. That gospel is summed up in the thirty-eighth verse of the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. It was on the day of Pentecost, when Peter, filled with Holy Spirit, preached to men of Judea with such power that, as the sacred writer says, "They were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and the rest of the apostles, 'Men and brethren, what shall we do?'" This was their confession of faith in Jesus Christ, seeing which, Peter said to them, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Here then is the whole secret of the true gospel in a nutshell. Faith, repentance, baptism for the remission of sin by some one having the authority to administer it, such as the saints and apostles of Mormonism, and obedience—simple, implicit obedience—to the law of God. We have apostles and prophets even as the followers and early children of Christ had, and they are endowed with the same powers and that their predecessors possessed, and they preach the gospel, prophesy and heal as did the earlier fathers of the Church. I stand here, he continued, a man who knew most intimately JOSEPH SMITH, aye, he who was murdered afterward for his faith. I say I knew him as but few men now living knew him, and I say to you that he was the best man that lived since the days of the apostles. And when we meet him face to face at the bar of God, where man's excellence is measured by the man Christ, he, JOSEPH SMITH, will be found in the ranks of the apostles and prophets, even as one of them. Went he then to his death in no man so good as BRIGHAM YOUNG, and I know he is. Do you think that fellow with all the wives. He a good man? Oh, you cannot make us believe that." But I tell you it is so. You in your ignorance condemn the man because he is a polygamist. Is polygamy wrong? No, it is not. Show me in your own Bible—yes, turn to the page if you can—that contains a word against polygamy uttered by Christ and the prophets in an age when every man was a polygamist. I say you cannot. And if Christ did not condemn it who shall dare to say it is wrong? On the contrary there was David, the royal psalmist, a man after God's own heart, a polygamist, not only a polygamist, but, in the eyes of people nowadays, an adulterer. True he had plenty of wives, yet his eyes fell upon Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah, and he possessed her. After Uriah's death he took her, Bathsheba, as his wife, and she bore to him the wisest of kings and greatest of men—Solomon. Now the Scriptures say that he was the 25 illegitimate child, even the 10th legitimate, can enter into the kingdom of God. Yet was he not upon the favored child of God. Therefore was the wedlock at which he was begotten blessed. The Lord approved of polygamy in those days, and has not, so far as the Apostles, the exponents of the law and wishes have taught us, changed the law of it to this day. Moreover it would be in this country a benefit to society. Look at the last census of our country and you will find that the women far outnumber the men. Well, if every man is to have but one wife, what is to become of all the single women who will remain unprovided for? Shall I say it? They, in too many instances, will become castaways. Now, on the other hand, permit men to marry as many wives as they can support, and all will be provided for. None, or very few, will be left to the perils of prostitution. These are hard statements, but they are correct. Look at your Christian communities; is not prostitution a living ulcer upon them? On the contrary, look at the Mormon communities, and you will find that among them it does not exist at all. If, then, polygamy prevents prostitution, will you not agree that its existence in this country is a desirable thing? Unfortunately such is the vicious tendency of the human mind in this century that men are never able to look upon any side of the question, but the wrong side. Therefore it is almost impossible to introduce it for consideration among Christians, because the light of the true faith not yet having dawned upon them, they are ignorant and prone to mockery. In the house of the man of many wives you will say jealousies and bitter feelings will arise. They may, no doubt, but what a great, good work is he doing who manages his affairs so as to completely overcome these jealousies, to preserve harmony, love and cheerish his wives, and lead them with himself to God, by obeying the truths of Heaven.

When the elder ceased, and was followed by a prayer from Mr. POTTS. The concluding exercises consisted of testimonies of their faith by several of the brethren and younger sisters, after which the benediction was pronounced in due form.

A Young Girl Walks Thirty Feet in a St. Louis Theatre—Both Arms Broken and her Head Severely Bruised.

From the St. Louis Republican, Nov. 12.

On Sunday night last Mlle. SAGRINO, a performer on what is called the flying trapeze, began an engagement at the Varieties Theatre. We understand that she is about 18 years of age, of foreign birth, and the wife of HERCULES LIZERT, a cannon ball manipulator, now performing at the same theatre. The dangerous feats of Mlle. SAGRINO for they are all done near the dome of the building, and with no net beneath to save her in the event of a fall, drew crowds of admiring spectators, and nothing occurred out of the usual course until last evening about 9 o'clock. At this time she was upon the trapeze, executing the various portions of a programme which is nothing but a mad risk of human life from beginning to end. The audience noticed that she seemed less skilful than ordinary, and that once or twice she appeared to keep her balance upon the swinging bar with great difficulty. But she went on, and at last in one of her evolutions she lost her hold, and, grasped at the cords, missed them, and was hurled headlong to the floor below—a distance of not less than 30 feet! The motion of her body at the moment the accident took place, bent the poor woman so far forward as the crowd saw where she struck her head, on the back of a chair and her arms across a music stand. A wild yell of horror rose from the audience as they witnessed the terrific sight and saw the form of Mlle. SAGRINO, apparently lifeless, as it was, disappeared instant and awful death. A rush was made to the spot, but the manager was there before them all, and dashing his handkerchief with, drew her behind the scenes.

The fire physicians who arrived in Dr. R. D. HILLMAN's carriage, and who had been sent for by them to examine—so far as he was then able to ascertain—of a severe contusion, two inches in length, across the forehead, and a fracture of both arms near the wrist. Other physicians were soon on the spot, and she was conveyed as soon as possible, was conveyed to her rooms at the Everett House, where, at a late hour last night, she was as comfortable as could be expected under the circumstances. It is believed that no fatal result is likely to transpire, but this cannot, of course, be certainly determined until to-day. We hope—although the hope is a very one—that this accident will produce some sort of prohibition of all such trapeze performances in future. They ought to be banished from every civilized community.

WASHINGTON.

The Ex-Chief of the Bureau of Statistics and the Treasury Department—Cotton Mélange Annexation—Naval Vessels Fitted for Hostilities for Non-Reciprocity with Canada.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Mr. ALEXANDER DELMAR, who resides actively for home, and who will have the former if he cannot have the latter, has joined the Washington staff of your contemporary, the World, and is engaged as secretary preparatory to the enlargement "authenticity" employed on that paper. With much caution, Mr. DELMAR thanks the Secretary of the Treasury for the recent quarterly statement, which he says is in response to his "request." He then telegraphs a criticism upon it calling attention to certain alleged discrepancies between the statement and the monthly debt bulletin, showing that the balances were really larger by several millions on the 1st of July and the 1st of October than they were stated to be at the time, as if the ignorants did not know that the monthly statement is made up from the books precisely as they appear at the close of business at the last day of each month, without reference to what may be in transition, and as if he did not also know that the quarterly statement covers the whole quarter, including each and every transaction down to the last, the details of many of which are not received at the Treasury for many days after the close of the quarter. It may be a violent presumption to presume that DELMAR knows even this, but he can hardly know less and still know anything.

THE SAN DOMINGO AFFAIR.

The talk about San Domingo and its acquisition, which the Government is alleged to be now preparing for, has no more basis than the following fugle: The design for the establishment of a protectorate originated with President BABE himself, and Mr. SEWARD consented to use his efforts to induce Congress to grant the necessary authority. This he did quietly by posting the House Foreign Affairs Committee in regard to the desire of San Domingo for annexation. Pending this matter, a direct proposition for annexation was received from BABE, but not acted upon, owing to the retirement of Mr. SEWARD. The protectorate proposition failed in the House, notwithstanding the able advocacy of Judge ORTH, of the Foreign Affairs Committee, and a simple resolution passed the House calling upon the President to communicate to Congress as soon as convenient all the information in his possession concerning the condition and resources of the Republic, and the reported desire of its Government and people for annexation to the United States. This will explain the mission of General BABCOCK to that Government, and on his return a few weeks hence, the President will be able to respond to the request of the House with the latest and fullest information.

OPERATIONS OF THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

Eighty-one vessels have been repaired and put in sea-going order, or in such condition that they can go to sea at a few days' notice, since the 1st day of May. This has been done by the Navy Department at an expense of more than one million dollars less than that expended during the same months in 1862, when but four vessels, all told, were put in commission. Four of our largest and most powerful iron-clads are now on the Atlantic coast, including the Dictator, which sailed from Hampton Roads on Friday for Key West to join the West India Squadron. The steamer Severn will sail in a few days for the same station, and on her arrival Admiral Poor will transfer his flag to her, and the Powhatan will come home for repairs. The names of the iron-clads now afloat are the Dictator, the Saugus, the Miantonomoh and the Terror. They all carry fifteen-inch guns.

THE REVENUE BUREAU.

Commissioner DELANO has now before him the reports of three special committees appointed in the Department, who have been investigating, first, the meter system; second, the best means of canceling stamps; and, third, the best method of preventing the reafixing of canceled stamps. The views of these committees will probably be embodied in the Commissioner's report, or at least made use of in that document.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

CANADIAN RECIPROCITY.

The following, derived from private sources, is believed to be a correct statement of the position of our Government and that of Great Britain upon the subject of a rearrangement of trade relations with the Dominion of Canada. The matter comes up for adjustment, not in consequence of the resolution of the House of Representatives, but because the Government appreciates the importance of settling the fishery question amicably and with reference to the interests of American fishermen; and because, also, it is deemed important in the interests of the great West that the freedom of the navigation of the St. Lawrence should be secured and that the canals of Canada should be enlarged to the capacity of our wants, free of cost to us. The Canadian authorities have notified our Government that unless the trade between the two countries is so arranged as to be somewhat reciprocal, they fear they will be unable to withstand the pressure from all parts of the Dominion, urging them to do away with the system of fishery licenses, and compelling American fishermen to remain outside of the three-mile limits of the shores of Canada; to establish a duty on foreign coal so as to give the market of Western Canada to Nova Scotia coal, instead of having it supplied as at present, from Pennsylvania and Ohio; to place an export duty on pine timber, and an import duty on American breadstuffs, a large market for which is now found in Canada under their free admission by the present Canadian tariff, the returns for the last year showing the value of breadstuffs, wheat, corn, rye, &c., imported from the United States into Canada, to have been $12,562,561.

It is said there is no question as to whether the resolution of the House of Representatives asking the Executive to reopen negotiations with Great Britain for the adjustment of these matters, is mandatory in its terms or not, because under our form of government no resolution of the House of Representatives can be mandatory on the Executive as regards the treaty-making power. It is simply advisory, a mere expression of opinion of the same character, but naturally of greater importance than the resolution of similar effect of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New-York, and the Boards of Trade of the various States.

The Secretary of State having his attention called to the importance of the undetermined commercial questions between this country and Canada in the manner indicated, addressed the British Minister here during last Summer, and invited his assistance in a proper endeavor to adjust them. It is understood that Mr. THORNTON communicated with the Government of Canada, and the authorities there having expressed their concurrence in the importance of arranging the various questions amicably if possible, a general understanding was arrived at to discuss the matter in detail, when the Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Treasury would be enabled to avail themselves of the assistance of leading Senators and Congressmen, so as to know how far concessions could be made in the general interchange of raw products by way of equivalent for the concessions demanded of Canada. It is safe to say that the matter will not be determined until after a full and careful examination of the whole subject, and solely with a view to the interests of the people of the United States.

RECOGNITION OF FOREIGN CONSULS.

The President has recognized JULIAN ALFERO PERIGNIT Y GATORNE as Vice-Consul of Spain at Philadelphia; THEODORE WAGNER, Vice-Consul of Sweden and Norway at Galveston, Texas; JUAN URRUTIA Y PALOMO, Consul of Guatemala at San Francisco, Cal., and H. CRAMMINUS, Consul of Baden at Chicago, Ill.

HAYTI.

Renewed Exactions of Salnave—The Blockade to be Enforced—Capture and Release of British Vessels—Government Monopoly of Coffee—Issue of Bills to the Amount of $2,000,000 Gold—Old Currency to be Destroyed—Port de Paix Captured by the Rebels—Gold, 1,700.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Saturday, Oct. 30, 1869.

The arrival here from New-York of the steamer Alnaquais, lately purchased for this Government, has inspired SALNAVE and his party with fresh hope, as they will now be enabled to prosecute the war with greater vigor, and may probably retrieve in a measure the disasters of the last two or three months. The steamers Salnave and Petion—the former badly damaged in the late fight with the rebel navy—are still at Cape Haytien. The paddles of the Salnave have been repaired, and the ship, it is expected, will shortly be taken to sea under American officers, who came out from New-York in the Port-au-Prince, and whose services have been engaged by SALNAVE. The rebel steamers are at Aux Cayes, the headquarters of the revolutionary army and navy, where preparations are making for a combined attack on Port-au-Prince and the Cape. The rebels lost in the late engagement off Cape Haytien sixteen killed and eighteen mortally wounded.

Now that SALNAVE's navy is reinforced, there will be greater activity in the seizure of vessels attempting to run the blockade of the ports that have been declared closed, and in this morning's Moniteur a lengthy official notice appears declaring the intention of the Government strictly to enforce the blockade, and to seize all merchant vessels appearing in Haytian waters with contraband of war on board, their destination being the blockaded ports, or any port in possession of the rebels. Vessels calling at Aux Cayes, which is an open port, are liable to seizure, and their Captains and crews to imprisonment. The Petion lately seized an English schooner coming out of Aquin. The vessel and cargo were condemned and sold, and her Captain sentenced to six months' imprisonment; but the President has pardoned him. Another English schooner was seized by the tugboat Colonel Lloyd Aspinwall, and brought into this port; but the British Consul having been called upon to interfere the schooner was released, the Lloyd Aspinwall towing her to her destination. Damages have been claimed, and the Government will no doubt be compelled to make good the losses sustained from the seizure and detention of the schooner. SALNAVE is himself on board the steamer Pegasus, which is being fitted out for active service, superintending her equipment. The name of this vessel has been changed to the Terror.

Cape Haytien has received a supply of provisions, sent thither in the steamer Port-au-Prince. The town was on the point of surrendering to the rebels when the supplies came to hand; as the people were literally starving. At Aux Cayes and Jeremie the rebels are kept in check; but that is all, the Government forces not being in a position to assume the defensive. Troops have been sent to retake Miragoane, but at latest advices the place had not yet been attacked. Both at Gonaives and St. Marc an attempt has been made to get up a movement in favor of SALNAVE, but without success. All is quiet in this city and neighborhood.

The Government monopoly of coffee is working very badly for trade. Under its operation the Government becomes the purchaser of all the coffee brought to market, paying for it at the rate of $1,000 (Haytian) per 100 pounds, and then sells to the merchants and others at a market price, fixed by itself, of $1,600 (Haytian); thus making an enormous profit out of the transaction, but victimizing both the producers and the dealers. In addition to the disadvantage they suffer in this way, the merchants are now compelled to pay duties at the Custom House in gold, which they have to purchase from the Government, each dollar in specie costing them $1,600 Haytian currency. This monopoly is, in fact, working ruin to the business of the country. To make matters worse, the Legislative Council has just enacted a law authorizing the Government to make a new issue of two millions of dollars in bills, payable to bearer, and receivable in payment of Customs dues, the note to be taken at the full value appearing on its face. At the same time another law has been passed providing for the immediate withdrawal from circulation, and the destruction of all Haytian paper money issued by any Government prior to the year 1860. These two measures, it is feared, will have the effect of completely unsettling all business arrangements, and ultimately destroying what trade there is left.

Coffee is coming into market more freely, and the quality is much improved. Provisions are abundant, but the monopoly affects the market, injuriously restricting sales, and reducing profits largely. Logwood is getting scarcer, owing to the large number of vessels loading with that article, and to the closing of the port of Miragoane. Gold and bills, 1,700.

CURRENT NOTES.

The St. Paul Pioneer admits that the latest official and corrected returns for Governor of Minnesota give Judge AUSTIN, Republican, 300 majority. Four counties remained to be heard from, which will increase this majority. The Press says the Senate will contain 14 Republicans and 8 Democrats, and the House 28 Republicans and 19 Democrats.

AMUSEMENTS.

Announcements for To-Night.

At the Academy "Norma" is to be given to-night by Mme. BRIOL, Miss LOUISE C. TIMUNS and Signori MASSIMILIANI and COLLETTI. The season here is prospering finely, and we trust the attendance on this occasion will be up to the encouraging standard of last week.

Mme. ANNA BISHOP announces for this evening her second concert at Steinway Hall. The success of the first was decided, and a fine audience for the second is confidently expected. M. KOWALSKI, the pianist, who made a very favorable impression on his debut last week, will play some new selections. Signor ROMONI will sing twice, and other artists of talent will also appear.

The first representation this season of the Richings English Opera Troupe is offered tonight at the Grand Opera House with "Maritana" for the initiatory work. The company includes the names of several singers of acknowledged ability, and we hope it will meet the success it deserves.

At Booth's, Miss BATEMAN enters upon the last week but two of a most prosperous engagement.

The representations of "Caste" begin at the Fifth-avenue Theatre this evening, Mrs. F. S. CHANFRAU is to act Esther Eccles; Miss FANNY DAVENPORT, Polly; Mrs. GILBERT, The Marchioness; Mr. DAVIDGE, Old Eccles; Mr. GEORGE CLARKE, D'Alroy, and Mr. J. B. POLK, Hautree.

The French Theatre will be reopened to-night under the management of Mr. CLINTON W. TAYLEURE. The play to constitute the entertainment is altogether new. It is called "London," is from the pen of Messrs. LESLIE and CLARKE, and will be illustrated by numerous sets of elaborate and truthful scenery, imported from England. The company is led by Mrs. CLARA JENNINGS and Messrs. F. C. BARNS, LEWIS BAKER and C. T. PARSLOE, Jr.

At Wallack's, the programme of the past week will undergo no change. How delightful a performance is to be looked for may be anticipated by those who had a glance at the eulogistic references elicited on all sides by the representations of "Home" and of "A Regular Fix."

At Niblo's, Miss LOTTA's engagement continues. "Little Nell and the Marchioness" remains the current attraction, and a very magnetic one. Yet a change of bill is proposed at the close of this week, as these performances of Mr. BROUGHAM's piece are the last to be witnessed of that not unpleasing story.

At the Olympic "Poor Humanity" will occupy the bills all this week, together with the farce of "A Bull in a China Shop." Mr. MORTIMER's performance in the latter piece is quite an admirable one, while Mr. HOLSTON's Africanist impersonation of Mother Wisby in "Poor Humanity," ought to secure for that play a prosperous run. But, we fear, it is so delicately finished and unexaggerated that it will not after all give the drama a great vitality.

At Wood's Museum, Mr. ROBINSON will act by day, and two newcomers, Mr. JEROME and Miss CLELIA HOWSON, by night. The latter artists appear in "Aladdin." A menagerie, we note, has been added to the animate wonders of the place, and an assortment of lions, tigers and elephants, extensive enough to attract the curious and the studious, can be inspected at all hours, with pleasure and profit.

The Bowery Theatre changes its bill to-night, and offers, as usual, quantity and variety. Mr. EDWIN BLANCHARD will appear with his trained dogs in "The Lost Shilling," and, besides this drama, "Idiot Jack" and the pantomime, "The Country School," will be rendered.

At the New-York Circus a new lady rider, Miss PAULINE HINDLEY, appears in the local arena for the first time. She is said to be daring and pretty. The Bedouin Arabs, we observe, remain at this popular house until further advices.

The Minstrels—Bryants' and the San Francisco party—have no change of bill or of prosperity to record. Two such strong companies, each possessed of characteristics of its own, have never before been gathered in this City.

Arrival of the Steamship City of Mexico.

The steamship City of Mexico, which left Vera Cruz Nov. 3, Sisal Nov. 5, and Havana Nov. 8, reached this port yesterday. Purser J. W. BENNEE has our thanks for courtesies.

A New Hospital for Diseases of the Eye and Ear.

A new hospital for the above class of diseases has been opened and put in working order by Dr. H. KNAPP, formerly Professor in the University of Heidelberg. It is incorporated under the name of "The New-York Ophthalmic and Aural Institute." Gurdon Buck, M. D., A. C. Post, M. D., F. S. Winston, C. H. Louisel, A. D. F. Randolph, N. J. Waterbury, General James Bowen and J. G. Metcalf are among the members of the Board of Trustees. On Friday, the 12th inst., the Board held their first meeting. A general survey of the hospital was made and great satisfaction expressed at the elegance and general adaptation of the building for the purpose intended. It is designed for patients of all classes. Dr. KNAPP read his report for the first six months the institute has been established. He stated that 816 patients had been treated gratuitously in the dispensary, which is open to the poor every day from 1 to 3 P. M., sixty-nine patients were admitted to the house; ninety-seven operations performed, seventeen being for cataract. Some thirty students attend the regular course of instruction given by Dr. KNAPP during the Winter. Medical and financial reports were read, and the Board elected as officers: President, F. S. WINSTON; Vice-President, GURDON BUCK; E. S. BALLIS, Treasurer, and PHILIP BURNHOUSE, Secretary. The medical staff consists of Dr. H. KNAPP, Dr. TH. GOOLEY and F. AUB. The by-laws were next read and adopted, the meeting was very full one. President WINSTON said the institute now established would succeed, and welcomed its founder to New-York and his new and worthy field of labor. The building of the infirmary is at No. 48 East Twelfth-street, near Broadway.

The New Railway Manager.

The strike of the brakemen upon the Erie Road is virtually disposed of. The men expected solicitation from the engineers, but this they have so far failed to receive. Most of the engineers entertain the proposition far from favorably.

The engineers HOYT and DREW, who a few days ago delivered speeches expressing sympathy with the striking brakemen, have been indefinitely suspended from their positions. HOYT has, it is reported, apologized for his conduct to the General Superintendent of the road, and may possibly be reinstated. The general sentiment among their fellow engineers approves the course of the Company in regard to these men.

The contemplated strike of the brakemen in the employ of the Company, on its Great Western Division, has not yet received any definite shape. The sentiment in favor of it, however, daily gains strength, and it is probable that unless the Company makes an early payment of the moneys due these men, or comes to some settlement with them, the contemplated strike will be inaugurated at least.

It is reported that on Saturday last, HOUGHTALING, the presiding officer of the Society of the strikers, while engaged upon the grounds of the Company at Port Jervis in dissuading some men from working, who were inclined to do so, encountered General Superintendent RUCKER. Some words passed between the officer, who ordered HOUGHTALING off the premises, and HOUGHTALING refused to go. RUCKER thereupon seized him by the collar, and put him off forcibly. The presiding officer has not since shown himself in these quarters.

Disturbance in Chatham Square.

As a Hibernian Society, returning from a funeral, was passing through Chatham Square yesterday afternoon the ranks of the procession were broken by the driver of car No. 178, of the Third-avenue line, who attempted to go on without waiting for the Hibernians to struggle over his track. The processionists resented this attempt with such extreme earnestness that in a few moments they had succeeded in creating a scene of disorder that looked very much like a riot. The driver of the car was, of course, savagely assaulted by the Hibernians, and, as the passengers interfered to protect him, there was imminent danger that a general fight would ensue, which was, in fact, only prevented by the arrival of Captain JOURDAN, of the Sixth Precinct, with a section of policemen. Order was then quickly restored, and, fortunately, before any one had been seriously injured. Captain JOURDAN contented himself with dispersing the crowd, and did not make any arrests.

Extensive Fire in Greenwich-Street.

At 12:30 o'clock this morning fire was discovered on the second floor of the four-story brick building, No. 176 Greenwich-street, and being fanned vehemently fired the entire building, with the contents had been materially damaged by fire or water. The first floor was occupied by A. & P. CLARK, dealers in boots and shoes, the second floor by J. G. WOODS, printer, and the upper floors by S. HARRISON, cigar maker. The property of the occupants of the lower floors of No. 178 Greenwich-street was also greatly damaged by water, but owing to the absence of all the owners it is impossible to give individual losses. The total loss from the conflagration will not exceed $10,000.

Arrest of a Wife Beater.

PATRICK CAMPBELL, of No. 519 First-avenue, last evening, was amusing himself by beating his wife, and FRANK KEARNEY interfering to protect the woman, was turned upon by CAMPBELL, who dealt him a blow on the head with an ax. The Police arriving at the moment, CAMPBELL was prevented from doing further damage, and was locked up in the Twenty-first Precinct Station House. KEARNEY's wound proved to be slight, and he was removed to his residence, No. 511 Tenth-avenue.

Church Dedication in Fifty-Sixth-Street.

The Central Presbyterian Church lately erected in Fifty-sixth-street, near Broadway, was dedicated yesterday morning. The congregation formerly worshipped in Broome-street, where their church was established in 1822. The present building is temporary, and will hold about 800 persons. There were also evening services, when Rev. Dr. MURRAY, of the Brick Presbyterian Church, preached to a large congregation.

Freethinkers' Society.

The bi-weekly lectures of this German society for this season commenced at No. 101 Hester-street yesterday afternoon, when Dr. ADOLPHUS DOUAI lectured before an audience, composed of ladies and gentlemen, on the history and cosmopolitan nature of German pedagogism founded by PESTALOZZI and DIESTERWEG.

Burned to Death.

On Saturday a child belonging to JOHN HART, of Jamaica, L. I., was burned to death. The mother left it in the kitchen unprotected while she went to perform some up-stairs duties, and on returning discovered it in flames. She endeavored to save it, but all to no purpose, and it died on Saturday evening.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

New-York.

A superbly-illuminated catalogue has just been issued by Mr. THEO. E. BALDWIN, (successor to the firm of BREWSTER & BALDWIN,) carriage builder of this City, the plates of which are said to have cost $10,000. Every style of carriage is handsomely pictured for the information of purchasers.

Among the Tammany candidates (in prospective) for Civil Justices is WILLIAM J. KANE, (Eighth District,) Assistant Corporation Counsel, and formerly of General CORCORAN's staff.

The deskmakers of the firm of BREWER & Co., Nos. 193 and 195 Essex-street, who have been on a strike since Tuesday last, and those of the firm of ADAM MUELLER, No. 288 Bleecker-street, who have been on a strike since Thursday last, on account of a reduction in their pay at the rate of ten per cent., held a meeting at No. 222 Second-street yesterday. They resolved to confer by committees with their employers in order to get their former pay. The number of workmen on strike is about eighty. They being paid by the piece, their earnings were, on the average, from $12 to $14 a week.

The Sixteenth Ward German-American School Club met at No. 237 West Twenty-third-street yesterday afternoon. The nomination of C. DICKS for School Trustee was recommended to both political parties, and that of WM. ZAHREN to the Republican Party for the same office, in case they decline to nominate DICKS.

The boys at the Sixteenth Ward Boys' Lodging House, No. 211 West Eighteenth-street, under the auspices of the Children's Aid Society, were addressed last evening by Mr. G. E. WARD. It was a very interesting and instructive discourse. By the kindness of two gentlemen the boys will be provided with a good dinner on Thanksgiving Day, at 7:30 P. M.

The Ladies' Union Relief Association's Fair will be open to-day, day and evening, for the purpose of selling off the goods donated to them. Among these are a square piano, presented by STEINWAY & SONS, to be sold cheap. Military mch, the Grand Army of the Republic, the Union League of America and the County Council of the Union League of America pledged their assistance to the Association when the Fair opened. The Fair has been a great success. Dr. CHAPIN's Church had a table in the Fair, which, with the exception of Mrs. KENNEDY's was the most successful in the Fair. This is the only Association that makes a specialty of assisting the soldiers and their families.

The Sunday evening meetings at the Eleventh Ward House of the Children's Aid Society, No. 700 East Eleventh-street, were commenced last evening. The services were conducted by Mr. D. BRUNE HAYNES and Mr. D. WILLIS JAMES. About seventy boys were present and participated with spirit in the exercises. The programme is a simple one—singing and reading by the boys, and short practical addresses by the gentlemen who conduct the meeting. Nowhere in the City are more interesting assemblies to be found, save those which convene at the lodging houses of the newsboys and bootblacks.

Brooklyn.

The purpose for which Mr. A. T. STEWART purchased the block in First-street, between North Twelfth and North Thirteenth streets, E. D., is said to be for the erection of a Hempstead Plains Railroad Depot market. The railroad will run through the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Wards, much to the enhancement of the salt meadow land and the thinly-settled and little-improved portions of these two wards.

A wall is now being erected in front of the Naval Burying Ground, near the Naval Hospital, on the Classon-avenue side, at the head of the Wallabout Canal.

The annual collection in aid of the work of the American Unitarian Association was taken up in the churches of Brooklyn belonging to that denomination, yesterday.

The Surveyor of the South Side Railroad has completed the survey of their new route to Hunter's Point, via the recently-purchased Flushing Railroad track, which they intend to tap at Penny Bridge, the distance between the two points being but one mile and a half. The Company intend using their freight branch, and will have to build only 3,000 feet of track. This will give them a good water front, and if the future developements should require it, a passenger depot.

The annual meeting of the Queens County Teachers' Institute will commence at Jamaica to-day, and will continue for one week.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The sales for the week just closed were not equal to the previous week. Considerable property was offered, but a large proportion of it was not sold. Some of the most desirable lots actually changed hands, but very many that were put up remain on the heads of the owners. The auctioneers did their utmost, but just now there is but little disposition shown to buy. The passion for suburban lots is decidedly on the wane. The sale of Staten Island property by Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER was quite a success, but there were no others of a like kind to interfere with it, and it promised to be the best for some weeks. The property, too, was really very beautiful and valuable; extraordinary facilities were offered the public before the day of sale to examine it; extensive and detailed advertising was done to make them familiar with it; an excellent and abundant lunch provided to keep the visitors in good humor, and no labor nor expense spared. The result was an entire success. Until the great Supreme Court sale of the Lorillard estate, on the 20th inst., no other sales of suburban property will be attempted, and it is to be hoped that none should be. Buyers are discouraged from visiting distant places of sale during this rather severe weather, and when they do, the aspect of the country is not of a character to inspire those feelings of exhilaration that frequently induce large purchases. At private sale but very little is being done. The dullness that usually precedes the close of the year is already perceptible, although that event is seven weeks distant. The Fall season has been by no means a profitable or active one for real estate brokers, for attention has been greatly drawn from City properties to suburban lots, and the business emanating in this taste of the public has been most largely shared in by the auctioneers. In Brooklyn property the same inactivity exists as in the New-York market, due to the same causes and influences; a few sales have been made, but none of any great importance. The improvements made at Hempstead Plains by Mr. A. T. STEWART are being pushed forward with energy and promptness. Several hundred men are employed in forming the principal avenue, which will extend from one extremity of the property to the other, which, in area, it will be remembered, is about the size of the Central Park, or eight thousand acres. Other avenues will also be formed as soon as the main route is completed, so that when the plain will present a series of drives of great beauty. These landscape and picturesque features will be followed by architectural improvements of a most extensive description. It is reported that Mr. STEWART designs to erect 400 first-class dwellings and villa residences at an average cost of about $8,000, or an aggregate cost of $3,200,000. After the chief avenues are thus beautifully furnished, the attention of the proprietor will be directed to dwellings of a less expensive character, so that the whole amount expended in the regeneration of this vast estate, will amount, probably, to the sum of $6,000,000. It is hardly likely that Mr. STEWART will construct such a park-like locality without furnishing the means of reaching it with facility from Brooklyn and New-York. The present public conveyance is by railroad and horse car, with some four or five removals, and consumes about two hours and a half in performing the journey of twenty miles. This must be reduced to at most three-quarters of an hour. There is little doubt that this will be effected in due time, and that the interval between Hempstead and the City of Brooklyn will gradually become thickly peopled. The improvements made and contemplated are of course valuable to all persons owning property in the vicinity. Since they were commenced the general value of land in the neighborhood has quite doubled.

The sales for the week were as follows:

New-York improved property	$17,800
Brooklyn improved property	41,325
Brooklyn unimproved property	41,195
Flatbush improved property	17,000
Flatbush unimproved property	29,830
Hoboken, N. J., improved property	50,000
Staten Island improved property	35,400
Staten Island unimproved property	81,600
Westchester County unimproved property	80,130
East New-York improved property	9,700
Manuet, N. Y., unimproved property	2,960
Bay Ridge, L. I., unimproved property	1,314
Great Neck, L. I., unimproved property	520
Total for the week	$371,974
Total for the week ending Nov. 6	249,857
Total for the month of September	435,765
Total for the month of October	815,536
Total sales from Jan. 1 to Aug. 1, 1869	95,905,459
Grand total	$97,018,390

To-day, at the Exchange Salesroom, Messrs. MULLER, WILKINS & CO. will sell four lots situate on north side of Sixty-seventh-street, commencing 150 feet west of the Eighth-avenue, between the Central Park and Grand Boulevard, each 25 by 100 feet.

To-morrow the same firm will, by order of the executors of CATHARINE DUNCAN, deceased, sell the valuable leasehold premises No. 13 Washington-square, near Fifth-avenue. The lease is from the Sailors' Snug Harbor for twenty-one years from the 1st of May, 1852, with usual covenants for renewal; annual ground rent, $475, taxes and assessments. The house is 31 feet 6 inches by about 65 feet, with an extension of about 40 feet. Lot 31 feet 6 inches by an average depth of 145 feet.

The same day Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER will sell 266 valuable building lots in the Twenty-first Ward, Brooklyn. The property is on the great line of the Twenty-first (late Ninth) Ward improvements, not further from New-York City Hall than Central Park, and when the bridge is completed will be far more accessible. Many of the lots are within a stone's throw of the Broadway Railroad, and all are between it and the Fulton-avenue Railroad.

The same day Messrs. BENNET & KLENEN will sell the Sands Point Hotel, with all the furniture, fixtures and the steamboat dock, with adjoining land, consisting of four beautiful building lots, each possessing a fine water front. Sands Point, L. I., a popular Summer resort, projecting far out into Long Island Sound, and unsurpassed for beauty of location and scenery, is situated on the north shore of Long Island, almost directly opposite New-Rochelle, and only sixteen miles from New-York City, one hour fifteen minutes sail by the steamers Somanhoka and Arrowsmith. The property offered comprises (besides the hotel plot, which contains 7½ acres) about 20 acres divided into four plots of from 2½ to 7 acres, each having a beautiful building site, with commanding view, and also a fine water front, affording the best facilities for bathing, fishing and yachting. The beautiful residence of Hon. RICHARD O'GORMAN, JOHN W. HARPER, Esq., and others adjoin the property. The regular steamer Somanhoka has been secured for the occasion, and will leave Peck-slip (Pier No. 23) at 11 A. M., stopping at Thirty-seventh-street at 11:15 A. M. In case of rainy or stormy weather the sale will take place upon the following Tuesday, Nov. 23. A photograph of the hotel may be seen at the auctioneer's office, No. 119 Cedar-street, where illustrated maps and tickets may be had.

Other sales of interest are advertised to be made during the week, particulars of which will be given hereafter.

WILLIAM M. BENNET, AUCTIONEER.
BENNET & KLENEN, AUCTIONEERS.

TUESDAY, Nov. 16, at 12 M., ON THE PREMISES, IN ONE LARGE SALE, by order of H. B. BONNARD, Esq., of the most desirable property on

SANDS POINT, L. I.,

Consisting of FOUR BEAUTIFUL BUILDING PLOTS, each POSSESSING A FINE WATER FRONT. The famous and popular Summer Resort,

SANDS POINT HOTEL,

WITH ALL THE FURNITURE, FIXTURES, Etc., and THE STEAMBOAT DOCK, with adjoining land, and water rights.

SANDS POINT is situated on the north shore of Long Island, almost directly opposite New-Rochelle, and only 16 miles from New-York City, (hour 15 minutes' sail by the steamers Somanhoka and Arrowsmith,) and is a most delightful place of resort, which fact of the above dock, (the property without exception of the North Shore, Long Island, enjoyed the support of all more than 20 years.)

This beautiful point of land, projecting far out into Long Island Sound, is unsurpassed for its beauty of location and scenery, as well as healthfulness.

It has long been a favorite place for resort and pleasure for our best families, and it is fast improving in popularity.

The property offered comprises (besides the Hotel plot, which contains 7½ acres,) about 20 acres divided into four plots of from 2½ to 7 acres, each having a beautiful building site, with commanding view, and also a fine water front, affording the best facilities for bathing, fishing and yachting.

The beautiful residences of Hon. Richard O'Gorman, John W. Harper, Esq., and others adjoin the property.

The regular steamer Somanhoka has been secured for the occasion, and will leave Peck-slip (Pier No. 23) at 11 A. M., stopping at Thirty-seventh-street at 11:15 A. M.

In case of rainy or stormy weather the sale will take place upon the following Tuesday, Nov. 23.

REFRESHMENTS will be served at the HOTEL upon the arrival of the BOAT.

A photograph of the hotel may be seen at our office. Illustrated maps and tickets are now ready. For full particulars apply to

BENNET & KLENEN, No. 37 Cedar-st.

On this occasion they will positively sell, without limit or reservation,

266 VALUABLE TWENTY-FIRST WARD BROOKLYN LOTS, SPLENDIDLY SITUATED ON THE GREAT LINE OF IMPROVEMENTS BETWEEN THE

BROADWAY AND FULTON-AVENUE RAILROADS.

The property consists of the ENTIRE BLOCK, bounded by Howard and Saratoga ave., Mason and McDonough-sts.

ENTIRE BLOCK, bounded by Howard and Saratoga ave., Decatur and Hancock-sts.
ENTIRE BLOCK, bounded by Saratoga and Hopkinson ave., Hancock and Decatur-sts.
ENTIRE BLOCK, bounded by Saratoga and Hopkinson ave., Decatur and Macon-sts.
ENTIRE BLOCK, (excepting front on Broadway,) bounded by Macon and Halsey-sts., Saratoga-av. and Broadway.
ONE SIXTH OF GREAT VALUE, 100 ft. long, on the entire front on Halsey-st., between Howard and Saratoga-ave.
ENTIRE FRONT ON WEST SIDE OF HOWARD-AV., between Halsey and Macon-sts.
SOUTHEAST CORNER OF HALSEY-ST. AND HOWARD-AV., valuable corner lot.

There will be the largest and most important sale of this kind ever made in Brooklyn. The property is on the great line of the 21st (late 9th) Ward improvements, not further from New-York City Hall than Central Park, and when the bridge is completed it will be far more accessible. Many of the lots are within a stone's throw of the Broadway Railroad, and all are between it and the Fulton-av. Railroad. Lots in New-York City, on account of Wall-st. than the above, bring readily from $6,000 to $10,000.

Access at once is easy, carefully examine the property and attend the sale. Terms liberal.

Large and valuable brewery, dwelling house and 100 splendid building lots to be sold without reserve. Maps at auctioneer's office.

SALE OF THE UNITED STATES ARMORY AND OTHER PROPERTY AT HARPER'S FERRY, WEST VA., AND VICINITY.

ORDNANCE OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, Sept. 25, 1869.

In pursuance of the order of the Secretary of War, and by direction of the Secretary of War, the property of the United States at Harper's Ferry, West Va., and vicinity, will be sold by public auction, on TUESDAY, the 16th day of November, 1869, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. and continuing from day to day until all is sold.

The value of this property for manufacturing purposes is well known. It is needless to describe it here, but a description of the same is being prepared, and will be sent to persons who may wish it, as soon as it is printed, upon their applying by letter to this office.

The property will be sold in lots. The first will include the Musket Factory, embracing a strip of land running to the Western Boundary, of the Potomac, the Armory Canal, and a large portion of the river. The walls of the large buildings are standing on the ground, and the foundations of several others; and the canal, which is filled with water, has flowed will almost perfect order. Three of them are turbines, of the most approved kind, and the others are mostly cast iron, with wooden buckets.

The second lot will include the site of the Rifle Factory and water power on the Shenandoah, the buildings upon which have been destroyed, but the canal is in good order.

The third will be the Shenandoah Ferry, with a tract of 46 acres of land on the south, and a lot on the Harper's Ferry shore opposite.

The fourth will be the perpetual right to cut and remove wood from a tract of 1,500 acres mountain land across the Shenandoah.

The fifth will be the right to dig iron ores from a tract of about 1,400 acres of land known as Friend's Ore Bank, acquired by deed from Henry Lee and others.

Thereunder, consisting of houses and lots in the town, will be sold lot by lot.

The Government will convey to the purchaser, after payment shall have been made in full, all the right and title to the property, which is believed to be perfect in every case.

The terms of sale, prescribed by law, are a credit of one and two years, the purchasers to give bond and security for the payment of the purchase money; and three firms must be complied with within ten days after the sale.

A map, showing the metes and bounds of the Harper's Ferry property, will be exhibited at the time of sale.

The Government reserves the right to withdraw any or all lots offered, if the bids are not satisfactory.

R. DYER,
Brevet Major-General, Chief Ordnance.

NOTICE TO DELINQUENTS.

Persons who purchased lots in 21st, and have not fully paid for the same, are notified that if they pay at once, and before the day of sale, the lots will be deeded to them, otherwise they will be resold.

R. DYER,
Brevet Major-General, Chief Ordnance.

SUPREME COURT—COUNTY OF NEW-YORK.—EDWARD MORGAN and others against HICKSON W. FIELD and others.—City and County of New-York, ss.—In pursuance of a decretal order of judgment made in this action, bearing date the 23d day of October, in the year 1869, will be sold at public auction, at the Merchants' Exchange Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the City of New-York, under the direction of the subscriber, Edmund Randolph Robinson, referee, by E. H. Ludlow & Co., auctioneers, on the 16th day of December, A. D. 1869, at 12 o'clock at noon that day, the property described as follows: All those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land, with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, lying and being in the New-York City, and bounded and described as follows, viz.: Beginning at the corner formed by the intersection of the northerly line of Washington-place and the westerly line of Mercer-street; thence southerly along the westerly line of Mercer-street 100 feet to the northerly line of Waverley-place; thence westerly along the northerly line of Waverley-place two hundred feet to the easterly line of Macdougal-street; thence southerly along the easterly line of Macdougal-street 100 feet to the southerly line of said lot now or late belonging to James J. Jones and parallel with Washington-place one hundred and forty-eight feet to the southerly line of said lot now or late belonging to James J. Jones and parallel with Mercer-street ninety-one feet and seven inches to the northerly line of Washington-place; thence easterly along said northerly line of Washington-place one hundred and forty-eight feet to the place of beginning; be the said several distances and dimensions more or less, together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.—Dated New-York, Oct. 26, 1869.

YONKERS PROPERTY FOR SALE.—By order of the Supreme Court.—In partition.—The valuable farm formerly occupied by Peter A. Crommelin, adjoining Yonkers, of about 120 acres, with all dwelling houses and outbuildings thereon, situate on the road leading from the Tuckahoe road to Mile Square road, in the Second Ward, will be sold by JAMES M. MILLER, auctioneer, on TUESDAY, 16th November, inst., at 1 o'clock P. M.

This farm is distant about 24 miles from West Mount Vernon Station on the Harlem Railroad, and about three miles from the village of Yonkers, and is in the future public path of new railroad lines now in contemplation. There are upon it many beautiful building sites, with very commanding views, and the land will be sold in lots varying from five to twelve acres each, according to a map, which may be examined at the office of the subscribers or of the auctioneer, and will be laid out from Tuckahoe road to Brownville, crossing Central-avenue and winding across this farm in the most advantageous manner, by which will reduce the distance from Yonkers to about two miles. This new road is now staked out, and the land will be sold with frontage now it wherever available.

For terms of sale and all other information inquire of W. L. & E. H. COWDREY, No. 67 Wall-st., New-York.

HENRY CLEWS & CO.,
No. 32 Wall-st., New-York.
PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY,
PHILADELPHIA, May 12, 1869.

Messrs. Henry Clews & Co., No. 32 Wall-st.:

GENTLEMEN: In answer to your request of the 17th ultimo, I have pleasure in stating the history and prospects of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Minnesota Railway, the character of the country through which it runs, and the probable value of the security you offer. You would state, that before accepting the trust imposed upon us by the First Mortgage Bonds of this Company, we had fully satisfied ourselves as to the practicability of the enterprise.

The road starts at one of the most flourishing cities on the Northern Mississippi River, and runs in a northwesterly direction up the great rich Cedar Valley, connecting at prominent points along the line with other railroads, now in active operation, nearly all of which must be more or less tributary or feeders to the road.

This enterprise is destined to become, in connection with other roads, an important one, being the shortest route of the great trunk line from Lake Superior via St. Paul, Cedar Rapids and Burlington, to St. Louis, and to the East, over the Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw, and Keokuk and Hannibal, roads, which are opened.

But aside from this, the populous condition of the country along the line of this road, its great productiveness and wealth, give sufficient guarantee of a local traffic, which, for any road, in the best reliance for success.

A good index of the prosperity and wealth of the country through which this road passes may be found in the fact that the Company reports over a million and a quarter of dollars subscribed and expended by individuals residing along the line in pushing on 100 miles of the work, and it is also a strong proof of the local support and necessity for the road.

Yours, very respectfully,

J. EDGAR THOMPSON,
President of the Pennsylvania R. R. Co.,
CHARLES L. FROST,
Pres't of the Tol., Peoria & Warsaw R. R. Co.,

History and Uses of Thanksgiving Days.

The Ecumenical Council—Father Hyacinthe—Sermon by Rev. Dr. Farley.

Last evening in the new Catholic church at College Point, Rev. Dr. FARLEY, of Jamaica, preached a sermon in which, after sketching the history of the Church, he said the Catholic Church is as firm to-day as it was eighteen centuries ago, and the storms and winds of heresy, infidelity and sectarianism cannot move the rock on which it is erected. Without the Pope there is no real Christianity, and to-day no mortal man separates from the Catholic Church can lay his hand to his heart and sign a clear definition of faith. We know from the promises of Christ that the Pope is commissioned to govern the whole world in faith and in morals. His powers are unlimited, bound neither by land nor water. He is the supreme pastor of the Universal Church, the Vicar of Christ and the successor of St. Peter. He who is not in communion with St. Peter is not with Christ. He is commanded by God to feed His flock, and is therefore the supreme custodian and shepherd of His divine institution and guardian of His flock. When any difficulty or doubt arises about the faith he convokes a council of the Bishops from the four quarters of the globe, to deliberate and determine what is and was the rule of faith established by the fathers. The objects of the Ecumenical Council are misconstrued and perverted when it is said that it is to frame and develop new articles of faith to comply with the increasing age of civilization; a proceeding which would be a monstrosity. The same God rules now that ruled eighteen centuries ago. The Church and the faith to-day is the same as it was then. The belief and creed that would redeem man then will redeem him to-day; and the same omnipotent God, who died for us, if we might live, will rejoice at the return of the sinner of to-day as he rejoiced at the return of His traitorous followers, and showers down His graces and His blessings upon the heads of the faithful. The Council has not the power to add to or take from the faith one single word. Its duty is to consider the doctrines held by the Apostles in the early age. The dogmas of faith are as unchangeable as the author. What the queen bee is to the hive, the Pope is to the Church. Take away the queen bee and you have no hive; take away the Pope and you have no religious head on earth. Yet that the Pope is infallible all history teaches, with his Cardinals and Councils to define the faith. There were councils during the Pagan persecutions, and no sooner had one Pope been martyred than another was consecrated. During even these dark ages their decisions were held as pure and infallible, and the wonder is that during eighteen centuries not one of the many Popes have erred in declaring matters of faith and morality. Peter held councils, and the word and teachings of the Holy Ghost were thus inspired. I know that the enemies of the faith single out two, LUMARINS and DEMOCUS, as having erred, but violence was used to extract from them what their minds and hearts abhorred. In the fourth century ARIUS denied the divinity of the God-Man. In the fifteenth century NESTORIUS denied the maternity of the Mother of God, and both were excommunicated by an Ecumenical Council. Since then many heresies have arisen, children of Jesus Christ have rebelled against His divine word and doctrine, and succeeded in indoctrinating with perverse and wicked beliefs the minds of people, but none have ever survived more than their contemporaries. Protestantism can now be counted among the things that were—a miserable failure. Lately a slight disturbance has been caused by the rebellious action of a vainly interested and haughty French preacher. Being possessed of considerable eloquence as a preacher, he was lauded to the highest key by the Parisian Press, and preached anything but the word of Christ and Him crucified. He forgot himself, and forgot the divine impression that he who would follow in the footsteps of Jesus Christ must deny himself the things of the world. He had a desire for earthly things, but the Spirit of the Holy Ghost has spoken whispered in his ear, "Return, thou wayward child." He would have gladly returned before being stripped of his charge, but for the humility it would inculcate, and would have exclaimed as did David, Peccavi!—"I have sinned!" The See of Peter is invulnerable, and he who approaches it contumaciously will be split in fragments.

Anniversary Services of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In accordance with the programme prepared by the General Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, appropriate services relating to the missionary work were held yesterday in all the churches of that denomination in New-York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, and in the other cities, villages and country roundabout. There were also held in the afternoon, in New-York and Brooklyn, three missionary love feasts and prayer meetings, presided over by Bishops THOMSON, SCOTT and AMES, and sermons were preached in all the churches in the evening on behalf of the cause.

In the Allen-street Church Bishop THOMSON preached in the morning from the text, "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." The belief, he said, that the religion of Christ will become universal is the command of God. But it may be well to note the signs of the times, which point to this consummation. Among these signs, seemingly designed by Providence for that purpose, is the rapidity with which communication with the world is now made. Formerly where it took three months to come from Europe to America it now takes only about five days. Immense canals are being cut, and others contemplated, which will shorten travel around the world by thousands of miles, and the time is fast approaching when, by cables in the ocean and railroads on the land in the eastern as well as the western world, men will be able in a few hours to communicate their ideas from one end of the earth to the other. A most important and effective agency was the improvement in the art of printing, and the agency of the Press. The newspaper is now being read even in the heathen lands, and wherever the missionaries go they are met by discussions of the doctrines of the Gospel both in the form of tracts and newspapers. Having conversed he was met by a Mohammedan, from whom he purchased a book written in refutation of the theories of Bishop COLENSO on the Books of Moses. Everywhere there is a shaking of confidence; the heathen religions and their devotees are becoming more impressionable and they are increased willingness to listen impartially to the doctrines and arguments of Christianity. Caste also, that great obstacle to Christianity, is fast fading away. China has now her colleges in which the European sciences are being taught, and to which thousands of her people go up annually to take their degrees. The approaching opening of the Suez Canal will bring face to face the people of the far East, of Europe, and the West, and through that means an interchange of ideas must ensue, which will work an immense advantage to the cause of Christianity. The old prophets of Buddhism have foretold the conquering of their land by a far-off nation, and this is a convert to the religion of the Cross. The people of India do not disguise the belief that that time is approaching, and that the Anglo-Saxon race is to be the conquerors. So near to it are they now that one of them announced to Major THOMPSON, the only survivor of the Cawnpore massacre, that the British Government had only to decree Christianity to have it generally adopted. The results of the missionary work are already vast. Over 20,000 converts in Asia and Africa are the result of the Protestant missions, while the Catholic missions number theirs by millions. Christianity must universally prevail, he said, because it is the only theory which can stand before the test of advancing science. It stood the test of the learning of ancient Greece, and came out of the burning fiery furnace unscathed. As it has stood the test in the past, so shall it in the future, while the heathen doctrines must crumble in dust and sink into oblivion before the light of science and reason, advancing civilization and the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. The missionary cause is now $100,000 in debt, and the necessity urgent to sustain it by increased contributions. Some might say: "Withdraw the missionaries." But will these be withdrawn? Shall they now forsake the fold, and leave them to the mercy of the wolf? Have they no other bidding to obey than that of the society which sent them forth? Shall they not, supported or unsupported, obey God rather than man? As above, the Christian LEONIDAS and his band stands the record: "Go tell Sparta we lie here in obedience to her laws," so, rather than return, will those missionaries sign inscribed above their far-off graves: "Go tell the Saviour of men we lie here in obedience to His command."

In the Forsyth-street M. E. Church, in the morning, an eloquent sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. TWOMBLY, of the Wilmington (Del.) Conference, who is in the City as a member of the General Missionary Committee.

Infallibility—Sermon by Rev. Dr. Bellows.

Infallibility was the subject of a discourse by Rev. Dr. BELLOWS at All Souls' Unitarian Church last evening. The reverend gentleman took as his text the 26th verse of the 1st chapter of James, wherein the Gospel is described as "the perfect law of liberty." Man, he said, longs to find wisdom and perfection somewhere. Anterior to revelation, infallibility was sought for in the oracles. It was attributed to those who, by reason of superior endowments, were able to work on the fears or excited the veneration of their fellows. The infallibility or such as were thought to be so, were always of the priestly order. In the course of time this attribute was transferred from the priestly leaders and oracles to books of law and of ritual. Then sprang up the Shastra, the Vedas and others, prescribing not only the law of morals but the ritualistic observances. There was much in these of truth, but the non-essentials were made as obligatory as the truisms; hence their faults. Next, the Church was regarded as infallible. The infallibility of the Roman Church represents simply divine authority for making changes in faith and practice. That organism is steadfast in its claims to infallibility, but by no means unchangeable in its doctrines. This claim to infallibility rendered great benefit to the world in ages past, but has now served its purpose, and had its day. The Church of Christ is certainly infallible; its human interpreters are those to whom are to be attributed the errors that have prevailed and do now prevail. Now that the Roman Church has a competitor in Protestantism, it seeks to have its infallibility confirmed by a vote of its own Bishops. The Council will have undertaken a herculean task in attempting to bring about this state of things. It would be as sensible to force back the full grown fowl into the shell as to try and make the world believe that infallibility in matters of divine teaching has been confided to the hands of an excellent and venerable old man in St. Peter's. The infallibility of the Scriptures is the received rule and belief of Protestantism. This is coupled with the right of private judgment—a right which never existed in Mosaic times. Private judgment, according to the orthodox view, is the right to judge for one's self, provided it squares with the Athanasian or Nicene Creeds, the Thirty-nine Articles, or the Saybrook Platform. All these attempts to force the consciences of men were useless. They had resulted in the formation of wholesome divisions among Christians, and tended, eventually, to liberty. Sects are as necessary to the law of perfect liberty in religion as political parties are to the safety of the State. The inconsistency of Protestantism, as to private judgment, is its seeming strength, but real weakness. There ought to be less superstition as to the infallibility of the Scriptures, for there can be no such thing as verbal inspiration. The conscience is the last repository of infallibility. Acting on Protestant logic, the private conscience says, if competent to judge the true intent and meaning of the Scriptures, why not competent to take their place? This claim is as unreasonable as that which sets up undue veneration for Scripture; for, although the conscience is the final court to which everything must be submitted, it changes according to time, place and condition. The conclusion at which the preacher arrived was that there is no such thing as infallibility in anything human and finite, nor is it desirable there should be; and that we must glorify no one standard of right and wrong to the exclusion of others.

The History and Uses of Thanksgiving Days—A Sermon by Rev. W. T. Clark.

Rev. W. T. CLARK preached at Unity Chapel, Hoboken, last evening, on the "History and Uses of Thanksgiving Days," taking for his text the fourth and fifth verses of the twelfth chapter of Isaiah: "And in that day shall ye say, Praise the Lord, call upon his name, declare his doings among the people, make mention that his name is exalted. Sing unto the Lord; for he hath done excellent things: this is known in all the earth." Days of thanksgiving, he said, were a Jewish institution, and were made by the Hebrews occasions of joy and hilarity. All the ancient nations made their religious anniversaries days of feasting and of enjoyment. The Puritans were Jewish in many of their religious notions, and when their labors were first rewarded by plentiful crops they appointed a special day of rejoicing. From them we have received the custom of observing one day in the year as a season of praise and thanksgiving. We, too, should make it a day of joy and happiness. The tendency of the prevailing religion is to draw needy minds away from the beauties and attractions of this glorious world. Most praying is but solemn begging, a mendicant cry for more, instead of a joyous outpouring of gratitude for the bountiful blessings of the Creator. It is well to set apart one day for the special recognition of divine bounty and goodness, and it should be celebrated by a reasonable enjoyment of the good things of life. We shall be better all the year for it. Another use of Thanksgiving Day is the effect it has in strengthening the sentiment of home and the ties of family. This hurrying, practical life causes a neglect of the household gods, and we almost strangers to their own families, and thousands have no fireside of their own but are transient sojourners at hotels and boarding houses. It is a custom to be cherished, which brings children from home from their wanderings, gathers the home circle again about the parental roof, and knits up again the raveled bonds of family affection. Another beneficial effect of the day is to bring to our minds the sturdy virtues of the Puritans. We should emulate their confidence in high principles, and their adherence to their best convictions.

The Bible in the English Reformation—Sermon by Rev. N. H. Chamberlin.

Rev. N. H. CHAMBERLIN delivered a lecture last evening in Zion Church, corner of Madison-avenue and Thirty-eighth-street, on "The Bible in the English Reformation." In this lecture he said: We are to study some of those forces which opposed the corruptions of the Romish Church, and gave the Reformation its permanency. For a thousand years the Church had been falling into lethargy and decay, but the Good Shepherd was preparing for its awakening and renewal, and after the destruction of much of the rubbish under ELIZABETH, the great truth became reasserted that the Bible must be practically obeyed. Thus the Reformation took shape, and became a power in England. He paid a tribute to JOHN WICKLIFFE, and proceeded to say: To WILLIAM TYNDALE was due the credit of giving the Bible to the common people of England in their own language. The first edition of the New Testament was bought up by the English Bishop, without the author's knowledge, and burned in in the streets of London. This great and earnest man was betrayed and strangled, after publishing his second edition, praying in his last moments, "Lord, open the King of England's eyes." Subsequently, when HENRY VIII. found the necessity of using the Bible against the Pope, he encouraged its publication, and now the edition of JAMES is universally used. But of TYNDALE, with the martyrs' blood marks still upon it. In 1537 a strange procession moved from Fleet Prison to St. Paul's. At the centre of the nave sat WOOLSEY, with thirty-six of his clergy around him. Opposite to them six heretics were expressing penitence for reading the Bible, and then in humble procession they marched around the flame, casting their Bibles in. Now, in that same grand temple, as elsewhere throughout all England, the same Bible is freely, openly and constantly read. The Bible men of the Reformation, hungry after a famine of a thousand years, devoured it in an ecstasy of joy, and are to be honored for it. But Bible men should be also churchmen. It is not a man's sole business to save his own soul. He must encourage that system of the Church which seeks to save others. The Romish Church locked up the Bible and kept it; the Puritans have scattered it broadcast and lost it. To the Catholic Church belongs the great duty of preserving the Bible and properly interpreting it.

Church of the Heavenly Rest—Sermon by Rev. Dr. Weston.

The second sermon of the course on "The Conservative Spirit of the Episcopal Church, as Regards Changes in Doctrine and Ritual," was preached last evening by Rev. Dr. WESTON, of St. John's Chapel. After the usual preliminary services, he announced his text as

"Turn not from it, to the right hand or to the left."—Joshua, i., 7.

There is an old aphorism, he said, that "we go in the middle paths most safely." It is proposed to-day that the Ecumenical or Catholic Church, occupies the middle ground, when contrasted with Rome on the one hand, and Dissent on the other. First, in her Ritual—Rome's is gorgeous, the Puritan's is bald. Ours, avoiding the dramatic display of the one and the nakedness of the other, is simple without poverty and rich without splendor. Secondly, in the sacrament of holy baptism we occupy the middle ground. Rome declares that there is no salvation out of their Church, the entrance to which is through their baptism. Dissent, in some instances, ignores baptism altogether, in others denies it to infants, and in all does not recognize it as a saving ordinance. Thirdly, in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, we walk the middle paths. Fourthly, in regard to tradition, we hold the middle course. Rome teaches that Holy Scripture alone is not sufficient for salvation, but makes the written and unwritten tradition of men of equal importance with Holy Writ. Dissent, going to the other extreme, demands that we shall take the Bible without note or comment, and that, in interpreting it, each one is at liberty to commit his own individual judgment. We, moving between these two extremes, declare that the meaning of the Bible is the Bible; that, in interpreting it, we appeal to the primitive Church; that Holy Scripture is sufficient for salvation, and that the custodian and expositor is the Church. Firmly, we stand on the middle ground on the doctrine of the intermediate state. We are living in an eventful age. Men are asking what is truth? Thinking Christians are wearied with Dissent, and are striving for unity. The Bishop of Rome assembles his so-called Ecumenical Council. The Protestants with panoramic

Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER preached last evening from the forty-third and forty-fifth verses of the twelfth chapter of St. Matthew:

"When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest and findeth none."

The parable of the text, he said, was undoubtedly intended for the Jews as a nation. But the principle involved is universal; it has application to the Church and to individuals. It was to the latter that he would apply it on this occasion. A soul that is very pertinacious about itself—often and earnestly, but that nothing else to boast of—is a soul that God delights in. Men who are living in the practice of great sins frequently have an intermission—a period of introspection. These periods often continue for weeks or months; they are often the result of sickness; sometimes of reason and reflection; sometimes of the Spirit of God in their career of sin, from whatever cause, it is of the last importance that they should know what step to take next. The Scripture way is the only right way—break off your sins by righteousness; cease to do evil and learn to do well. A man must put all the earnestness and vim into his well doing that he did into his evil doing; unless he do this the old temptation will come back on him with redoubled force, and the last estate will be worse than the first. It will not be enough to turn from sin to a merely respectable and serviceable morality; there must be a fervent piety. Under this conceit and self-satisfied Pharisaism are often concealed the most base and verminous vices and passions, and such a man is more offensive in the sight of God than spontaneous and unconcealing sinfulness. All sins of the passions work physical as well as moral degeneration, so that passions become uncontrollable appetites. There are men—intemperate and lustful men—who, in their endeavors to reform, suffer the torments of the damned in this life. Thus a sinful man sins not only against his soul but against every bone in his body. Such men find reformation exceedingly difficult, and especially if they are men of leisure—so-called fortunate men—who have no regular occupation. The Speaker here drew a vivid and very ludicrous picture of an idle rout endeavoring to reform and lead a virtuous life. It is not a safe thing for a man who has been going wrong to merely cease to go wrong. He must gain an impetus in the right direction; he must put himself under new circumstances and be impelled by new motives. It is not enough to join the Church; he may belong to the Church and still not be a good man in the sight of God. A man must be converted; must receive a change of heart; must go to God and repent of all his sins, and consecrate himself while here and hereafter to the love and service of God.

The Husband and His Duties—A Sermon by Rev. Dr. W. Aikman.

Rev. Dr. W. AIKMAN preached the third of a series of sermons on the duties of husband and wife, in the Presbyterian church, last evening. His subject was "The Husband and his Duties," and he took for his text the words, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the Church, and gave himself for it." (Ephesians, v., 25.) Here, he said, was the highest possible standard of devoted affection, and it was addressed to husbands, like all other scriptural injunctions on this subject, because men were much more likely to become cold and neglectful than women.

The first duty of husbands is to sympathize with their wives in all their cares and labors. Men are apt to forget, in the perplexities and annoyances of business, that home cares are also annoying and try the patience and the strength of their wives. They come home expecting sympathy and attention, but are too apt to have none to give. Frequently they are morose and peevish, and give their attention to the newspaper, or leave the house and seek the companionship of men at the club or the hotel, while their wives are left alone and sad, borne down with family cares and longing for sympathy and affection. A single kindly word or look that shows his thought of her and her troubles, would lift half the load from her heart. Secondly, husbands should make confidants of their wives, consulting them on their business plans and prospects, and especially on their troubles and embarrassments. A woman's intuition is often better than all his wisdom and shrewdness. Her sympathy and counsel and interest is a powerful aid for his efforts, for their mutual welfare. Thirdly, men should show their love for their wives in constant attentions, in their manner of treating them, and in the thousand and one trifling offices of affection which may be hardly noticeable, but which make all the difference between a life of dull and undefined longing, and a cheery, happy existence. Above all, men should beware of treating their wives with rudeness and incivility, as if they were the only persons not entitled to their considerate kindness and respect. They should think of their sensitive feelings and their need of sympathy, and "never let the fire of love go out or cease to show that the flame is burning with unabated fervor."

Dedication of a New Presbyterian Church in Fifty-sixth-Street.

The Central Presbyterian Church, formerly of Broome-street, yesterday dedicated their new house of worship in West Fifty-sixth-street, near Broadway. The present building was commenced last Spring, and is simply the chapel of the church which will eventually be erected back of it, facing on Fifty-seventh-street. The Church property runs through from street to street, and is valued, with the chapel, at $90,000. The latter is a neat brick structure, tastily decorated inside, and capable of seating comfortably 500 persons.

The dedicatory services yesterday were of an interesting character, and were attended by a full congregation.

Rev. J. H. WILSON, pastor of the Church, offered the invocation prayer and delivered the sermon. Rev. Dr. STAULDING read the Scriptures and hymn, and the venerable Rev. Dr. T. H. SKINNER offered the dedicatory prayer.

The pastor's sermon was taken from the text Ezekiel, xlvii., 12, from which he discoursed on the "Influence of a Church edifice, considered independently of the preaching of the Gospel or the influence of worship."

The Bible in the Public Schools.

A meeting for the discussion of the Bible in connection with the public schools was held at No. 304 West Sixteenth-street, last evening. Dr. SHEPPARD presided. He said that a movement existed among the Catholics in this City, which had for its object the expulsion of the Protestant or King JAMES' version of the Bible from our public schools and the introduction of the Douay or Catholic version in its place. He denied that the Roman Catholics would not be satisfied with gaining such a victory, but that they would strive to keep out all children from the schools who were not Catholics, or who did not adopt their creed. He mentioned the fact that the Catholic institutions in this City received $225,000 out of $285,000 appropriated by the State Legislature last year to the various denominations, in order to show the great efforts made by the former religious body for securing a predominance over all other sects. He was in favor of having a liberal Christian spirit manifested in our free schools, but was opposed to the removal of the Protestant Bible. Remarks were also made by Messrs. MCCHESNEY, BULL, WILSON and others, after which the meeting adjourned.

Church Dedication in Jersey City.

The corner stone of a new Roman Catholic Church, to be known as St. Bridget's, was laid with appropriate ceremonies yesterday at the corner of Gilbert and Mercer streets, in Jersey City. Father CORRIGAN led the services, and deposited the stone. St. Peter's and the Hibernian benevolent societies, St. Patrick's and the Father Mathew temperance societies, the Workingmen's Union and the Laborers' Society, and St. Beniface Benevolent Society, all of Jersey City, together with St. Joseph's Temperance Society, of Hudson City, assisted in the ceremonies, while a concourse of spectators, to the number perhaps of three thousand, witnessed them. The dedicatory address was delivered by Father BURNES, of Camden. The church stands upon a lot at the corner designated. It has a brick foundation, which is to be surmounted by a frame superstructure. Its estimated capacity will be equal to the accommodation of between 700 and 800 people, and its cost as estimated is about $10,000.
